"The Leader of Low Prices."

58, 60, 62 and 64 Whitehall Street,

ATLANTA, GA.

PEYTON H. SNOOK.

In order to meet the demands of the trade, and keep abreast of the times, I will begin Monday morning, August 20th, and continue for ten days only, to sell my immense stock at

"Greatly Reduced Prices."

This embraces my entire assortment of Chamber, Parlor, Office and Dining Room Furniture, Bureaus, Wardrobes, Sideboards, Book-cases, Marble and Extension Tables, Hat racks, Lounges, Sofas, Easy Chairs, What-nots, Etergenes, Cabinets, Brackets, Pier and Mantel Glasses, Art Tables and Pedestals, Easels, Screens. Corner and Window Chairs, Mahogany Cabinet Work, and in fact every article in my warerooms is offered.

At Factory Prices

For the time specified only. Nor do I ask you to woo the fickle goddess of the dice box, or any other questionable methods, thereby forcing one customer to pay for the article another purchaser MAY win. This is exactly what it amounts to in its last analysis, and while I do not propose to "scoop" up stocks all all over the city and make myself a conspicuous long-eared quadruped (which may mean a mule, but it don't). I do say in to-day's Constitution that I will create a sensation in the Furniture trade in Atlanta.

For the Next Ten Days—

And whether H. I. Kimball rebuilds the Kimball House, or forces some other enterprising citizen to do so, I am determined to reduce my stock fully Fifteen Thousand Dollars between this and 1st Sept. First get my prices, compare them with any other Atlanta dealers', then buy from the one that offers the best bargains, regardless of the Lottery "Trick." This may be "clap-trap," but I believe I have always carried out my contracts and backed my judgment with a full compliance of every detail enumerated.

And while I do not accuse others of doing differently, I do say I have

$15,000 Worth Upholstered

Parlor Suits, Lounges, Folding and Fancy Chairs, that I am offering for Ten days only at Factory prices. Think of buying a beautiful Lounge for $5.00 Or a handsome Parlor Suit, $50 A neat Chamber Suit, for $18, Folding Loungers, only $10, Marble Hat Racks, only $10.

I also have about Two Hundred handsome Hotel Suits, with elegant Spring and Hair Mattresses, such as I sold Mr. Ed. Mercer.

For His Elegant European Hotel.

Which was opened last Sunday, and every room taken the very day it opened, and whose beds are pronounced the best in the south. Also for the trade

1,000 cheap Bedsteads.
1,000 dozen cheap Chairs.
100 cheap Bureaus.
1,000 Tables and Washstands
500 cheap Mattresses.
300 cheap Cribs.

Send for price list, and remember don't be tricked into buying a single article until you have examined my stock. I can save you from $10.00 to $25.00 on every suit.

LIFE IN NEW YORK.

A THRILLING PICTURE OF AN ORTHODOX HELL

In Which the Seekers After the Terrible Have Their Desires Gratified—Banvard as a Successor to Barnum—A Dull Looking Audience—Emma Abbott's Advertising Scheme,

Special to The Constitution.

NEW YORK, August 17.—If I call this tent a side-show it is not because I overlooked or contemptuously regarded the placard which described it as a gospel temple. But the neighborhood as a whole was so pretentious, so like the gaudiness of a magnified circus, that the little canvas had the insignificance by comparison of a ten-cent annex. I looked in vain for the bright daubs depicting the monstrosities on view within to be sure, but a loud voice like that of the voluble soliciting showman, was not lacking. Drawing near I read the inscription: "The rich man in hell." Ten or fifteen years ago there was in this city a painter of panoramas named John Banvard. He had made something of a fortune in promoting Biblical exhibitions, and had learned that the public liked to be horrified by lurid representations of the fiery future punishment as well as exalted by calm pictures of eternal joy. In those days Barnum came to the end of his profitable museum career in this city and went out of the business to subsequently embark in the style of traveling circus, in which he is now engaged. Banvard thought that Barnum was mistaken in the conclusion that the metropolitan public had progressed beyond the point where fat women delighted and living skeletons pleasurably thrilled, he noted also the smallness of the difference between his own name and that of the great humbugger, and the upshot was Banvard's museum. The novel feature of this establishment and the one on which his hope was principally placed, was a presentation of the old-fashioned, orthodox hell. It surpassed in realism anything which he had ever put on canvas, and he reasoned that it would prove proportionately more fascinating to spectators. In the first place, it was impressively located twenty five feet below the level of the main floor so that visitors had to descend into a weird dampness that forced a preliminary shiver. Preceding each hourly exhibition several long woeful echoing howls as of a human being in agony turned the shivering into an all over creeping of the flesh. Then a curtain was raised at one side of the vault disclosing a scene that was only clearly visible where the glare of red light fell on it, leaving the rest in ghostly shadow. There were active devils and little imps, flashings of forked lightning, shrinking and crouching wretches, nondescript beasts of frightful aspect, despairing cries and demoniac laughter, and finally the arrival of Satan himself as a climax to five minutes of the pandemonium. It was a shore exhibit, but too long for many a nervous and possibly conscience stricken witness of its mimic tortures. Women, children, and sometimes a man, used to rather hastily and shakily mount the stairs out of Banvard's hell before the boss devil arrived to bring down the curtain.

A thousand sermons on future punishment would not so deeply impress a sinner. Banvard said in defense of his show was this sight of its actualities.

He quoted Scriptures in support of the accuracy of everything in his artificial hades, and put it forward as a religious enterprise. But his calculations of profit proved incorrect, and his museum passed into other hands, to become a theatre under various names, and is now Daly's. The deep pit in which Banvard flashed the fires of devilry now contains a not less curious but quite unterrifying collection of the scene painter's contrivances, for it is used as a storeroom for stage properties. When Manager Daly says, "Go down to hell and tell them I sent you"—for the dragon's head," the command is neither a quotation or ecclesiastical, but relates to an object to be used in a forthcoming scene on the stage.

I have wandered away from the tent, which by the way, was pitched a little back from the beach at Long Branch, but I have scarcely departed from the subject, because the loud voice which I mentioned was employed in describing the tortures of the damned. It said here was the lake of fire and brimstone with sinners bathing in it horribly, that over there were myriad souls being punctured by the devil with his fork, that beyond was a vista of infinitely varied torment and all this was stated with a positiveness that made me hesitate at the entrance to prepare myself for something startling in the Banvard spectacular line. But the scene was quiet. Only the orators was disturbing. Nine men and four women were a lonesome audience in a row of chairs. The speaker was heavily bearded and voiced. He had no platform or pulpit, but stood behind a chair, and though within six feet of his furthest auditor—counting only those inside the tent—he was shouting his words with all his vocal might. Whether this was from habit, or was prompted by a desire to reach the ears of unintentional hearers, I could only conjecture. In favor of the latter theory was the fact that he loudly and unhesitatingly consigned sinful rich men to the worst of the tortures which he described, and it did not look as though any persons of that sort were within the canvas, while a great many were near enough outside to hear perforce the doom which he pronounced against them. They were rolling past in fine equipages, lounging on breezy verandas smoking ungodly tobacco, and above all, disregarding his admonition to make a crowded congregation in his gospel tent.

Within the sound of his voice, too, was the son of the duke of Newcastle, engaged in the sinful and decidedly vain attempt to beat a professional gambler at the gambler's own game. This was in the magnificent Pennsylvania club, a house which, with its furniture and embellishments, is said to have cost a hundred thousand dollars, all of which the fools who play in it must pay for, to say nothing of the heavy running expenses and profits. It is astonishing how many wise men are idiotic. At this very time there sat at the roulette table among many others, the largest New York city dealer in beef, an officer of the stock exchange, a bank president and a famous lawyer. All these had made fortunes by the use of their brains, and yet here they were engaged in the necessarily futile effort to overcome the advantage which the banker possesses in the game. A single calculating glance at the board was sufficiet to show that the chances were six per cent greater for the proprietor than for the players, to say nothing of the gain which in the long run, goes with the steady, methodical professional as against the spasmodic amateur. It was evident that Newcastle was one of those peculiar dupes who believed that the gaming madness can be reduced to method at the outside of the table. He had a pencil and a sheet of paper, and was keeping a record of the numbers as they were called. All of my readers may not know that the game of roulette consists of rolling a marble rapidly round the periphery of a horizontal wheel, and letting it slowly drop by itself as it circles down the sloping surface towards the center, until it falls into one of the thirty-eight numbered compartments. While the ball is thus making its circuits, the players make their bets on a table numbered in sections. Those who have selected the right figure are paid thirty six for one, or proportionate if they have spread their wager over several numbers and all the rest lose. As the cheapest chips at the Pennsylvania are a dollar apiece and the dearer ones run up as high as fifty dollars, it will be seen how easy it is for a single two-minute turn of the wheel to determine the ownership of many hundreds. The Stock Exchange official lost nearly a thousand during the brief spell that I watched him. Newcastle was not a heavy player, however, and it cost him less than a hundred, so far as I observed, to test his system, though it is not likely that he stopped with that trial. He seemed to have an idea that each number was bound to win an equal number of times within a certain period, and that by making a table he could determine eventually how to put his money on the right spots. Of course that is all nonsense, though he may never become convinced of it.

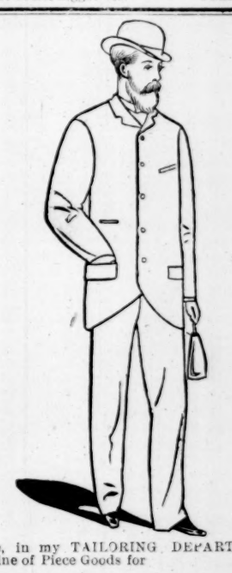

I have said something about ingenious advertising and, naturally, that brings me to those more persistent and audacious advertisers, the stage people. I met a man the other day who was saved from the gallows by an effort in this direction. Policeman Smith, of Jersey City, was assassinated while in bed with his wife, who had been sentimentally involved with Covert D. Bennett, younger than she, and in much better circumstances as to money and culture. The lovers were tried on the charge of murder and convicted without hesitation. The evidence was circumstantial, but convincing, and the jury was helped to its conclusion by an unfair charge from the bench That is to say, the judge believed the prisoners guilty, and took pains to let the twelve men understand that he expected them to come to his way of thinking. Well, the day appointed for an execution drew nigh, and there seemed to be no hope. Lawyers familiar with the case knew that there was ground on which a new trial might be obtained in the partial charge of the judge, but popular opinion was with the verdict, and the convicts had no money with which to employ counsel of sufficient ability to take up that phase of the case. Emma Abbott was then, as now, one of the shrewdest sly advertisers in the show business. She was on the point of starting out on a tour with her opera company. In the plight of Covert Bennett and Jennie Smith she saw an opportunity. She went to jail, talked with them, professed to be convinced of their innocence, wrote such an interesting letter on the subject to the papers that the editors were glad to publish it, and then went down into Wall street to raise money to appeal the case. Legal advice might have been obtained, but the court costs were to be met, and over the subscription paper for that ostensible purpose Miss Abbott kept herself conspicuous before the public throughout a week. Thousands of dollars spent in the advertising columns would have helped her no more than those free articles in the reading matter. A new trial for the prisoners, a disagreement of the jury, and eventual release, were consequences of the singer's shrewdness. Covert D. Bennett became an actor, first under the name of Eastman, but lately, at our Windsor theater, in the Bowery, without any concealment of his identity. He is a handsome fellow, and his looks so far compensate for lack of ability, that he gets along very comfortably with the audiences. What has become of Jennie Smith? Well, a friend of mine engaged a cook at an intelligence office, not long ago—a woman whose face bore the mixed marks of former joviality and present depression. She performed her duties well enough, and yet not like a servant of long experience. She had no great amount of refinement, but enough of repugnance to servitude to be frequently discernable in her manner. She was Jennie Smith, the widow of the murdered policeman.

Brother Bob Hart has written a letter to Bennett begging him not to stay on the stage. The show business is extremely wicked in Bob's estimation and it seems strange to him that a man who barely escaped from the gallows can afterward be so trivial and worldly as to engage in it. No doubt you recall Bob as a negro minstrel. He grew up and was educated in Jersey City, and that was why he knew Bennett. To the public, Bob was the funniest of burlesque stump-speakers; among his fellow performers he was known as a bummer. He commanded a salary of a $100 a week when sober, but kept drunk so much of the time that his income ran very low. Then he reformed, abandoned minstrelsy, and is now a Methodist evangelist. Without his face blackened, and his appearance rendered grotesque by a comical wig and exaggerated shirt collar, he makes an effective, religious speaker; but to those who familiarly remember his stump oratory, his efforts provoke smiles easier than tears. He has just been cured of asthma by faith; at least he believes his recovery to have been miraculously effected through prayer, and it is certain that the asthma is all gone.

"Bob's cure has made it impossible for him to backslide into the minstrel business, unless the disease comes on him again" said Tony Pastor, the variety singer.

"How is that?" I asked.

"Don't you remember that a peculiar huskiness of voice was what made him funny?" was the reply: "that was asthma Lack of breath was his fortune, so to speak. Recovered, he wouldn't be of any sort of use in the comic nigger biz." FRANKLIN.

I have, in my TAILORING DEPARTMENT, quite a line of Piece Goods for SUMMER & FALL PANTS.

And I will make them up C. O. D. at a reduction of 20 per cent from former prices.

My reason is twofold:

First. I want to clear these goods out of the way of Fall Goods.

In the second place, I want, as far as I can, to give every man a proof positive, before the Fall season sets in, of the place where he can have made

A gentleman in search of a Desk, dropped in at 44 Peachtree street yesterday, found that he could buy (at what another dealer told him was cost) ten per cent less. He concluded it would be wearing out shoe-leather to hunt further, and thereupon bought one of Miller's splendid desks.

ANDREW JACKSON.

ECHOES FROM THE SAGE OF HERMITAGE.

Some New Anecdotes and Unpublished Letters of Old Hickory—His Unreserved Views Upon Men and Affairs of His Time—Interesting Reminiscens s, Etc., Etc.

General E. G. W. Butler, who was a ward and intimate friend of Andrew Jackson, has given the St. Louis Republican some very interesting reminiscences of "Old Hickory." "I have his letters," said the general, "from 1821 till his death in 1845, Andrew Jackson was a man sui generis. He was the greatest man I ever knew. I sometimes fancied what a man he would have been with a liberal education, and then I have concluded that he was a greater man as he was. He accepted the mission to Mexico offered him by President Monroe, and when Iturbide was crowned emperor he declined to go, and wrote to me, who was to have accompanied him as private secretary: 'I have resigned the appointment of minister to Mexico. I could not, by presenting credentials to an imperial despot, aid in riveting the chains of a free people.'"

"About three weeks after his veto of Clay's 'Marysville road bill' I was opening and he was reading his letters, when he laid down the letter he was reading and inquired: 'Edward, my son, do you know that all of my cabinet, save one, were opposed to my veto?'

"I inquired, 'My dear general, is it possible that they were opposed to your veto on constitutional grounds?'

"He rose from the table, and pointing his finger at me, exclaimed: 'O, no, my son; not upon constitutional grounds, but upon the grounds of expediency—expediency. By the eternal, the people do not put me here to administer this government upon the ground of expediency!'

"The last time I saw General Jackson I went up to stay with him till he died. He had written to me to come to him from 'Dalayne,' my plantation in Louisiana, and while at the Hermitage he received a letter from Commodore Elliott informing him he had just returned from the command of the squadron in the Mediterranean, and had brought with him the sarcophagus of a Roman emperor, Severus, I think, which was subject to his order. We all thought it a pretty conception, but while at dinner he had himself propped up in bed and wrote the reply: 'My dear commodore, I feel greatly obliged by your kindness. I don't think the sarcophagus of a Roman emperor would be a fit depository for the remains of an American democrat.'

"After staying at the Hermitage some time, I met Dr. Hogg, his physician, and he told me the general might live six months. He talked brilliantly. When he became excited he would lean over and support his head on one hand. I left and was not present at the last scene. Mrs. Andrew Jackson, the wife of his adopted son, was present when I was there. She now resides at the Hermitage. She has a son and a daughter alive, and a widowed daughter with eight or nine children and dependent upon her."

The general brought out a number of letters addressed to him by Andrew Jackson, from which the following extracts are made:

"HERMITAGE, Jan. 8, 1832.—It has been with the greatest pleasure, my young friend, that I have tendered you that advice and counsel which my experience has enabled me to give, and especially when I have believed that I could contribute to your future welfare by impressing upon your mind the importance of morality and by directing your attention to such objects as were most likely to eventuate in your permanent interest. I have done so with the greatest cheerfulness and an eye single to your good. I trust then that you will view me, when opposing your determination to join the Russian service and abandon that of your country, as influenced by no sinister motive, but as alive only to those prospects which may determine your reputation and the character to which you may attain as a soldier and citizen. You say you have spent the best of your life in a profession which offers no inducement in your country. Let me ask what is it in the profession of arms in your country that is inconsistent with the character which awaits an officer devoted to its service—prepared by science for distinction in that service, and competent to wield or share in its battles and dangers? What is it in the character of your country that is unworthy of your efforts to sustain it? What in its national feeling that can not claim your participation? Where is the country, besides your own, whose glory in the protection of liberty and these equal rights which have long since been lost in the despotism and corruption of every European government? Where is that love of country which, living even with the chained and shackled peasantry of a monarch, despises all control? And would you renounce this sacred tie for the glory to be won in the uncertain career of a foreign emperor? Can you sacrifice the feelings which should characterize an American officer to the illusions which support royalty and conceal its corruption? I hope you could not. There are many objections, Edward, to you adopting the course you have named, but which I shall not mention, believing that you will unhesitatingly abandon a scheme which you have formed without reflection. It is true that the blind policy of the last congress has limited the prospect of reputation and distinction in our army, but things will not always be as they are.

"The policy must change; and, independent of this, what greater incentive do you want than the persuasion that, by improving the advantages which you now possess, you will be prepared to enter with distinction into the service of your country when it shall ask for your services and talents. Continue your studies and your proficiency shall be rewarded. Be industrious and you will not feel the miseries of idleness. ANDREW JACKSON."

The following extract is taken from a letter to Mr. Butler under date of May 1, 1823:

"I am much pleased to find that you have acquired such a correct opinion of human nature. In your passage through life it will be of great advantage to you, and preserve you from many difficulties that, without this knowledge, youths are apt to fall into. It is to be deplored that men in office are apt to assume an air of mystery in discharge of their public duties. In our government mystery does not belong to it; an open, candid, virtuous course ought to be pursued by all functionaries—orders given in clear and positive language easily to be understood and words incapable of double meaning, and in all answers to necessary inquiries, positive and candid. I never have seen an occasion where candor and truth was not proper. A case in our government can not exist where it ought not to be used. If it is proper to speak at all it should be with candor and truth. Adopt this for your guide, let others do as they may, and you will be always right. Occasions may occur where prudence would dictate silence, but if you speak at all, let it be with candor and truth. ANDREW JACKSON."

The next letter in the order of dates is one dated at Washington, January 20, 1824, in which, adverting to the celebration of January 8, in which he gained the victory over the British at New Orleans, he writes:

"It can not but be gratifying to me, dear E to see this day (Jan. 8) commemorated by the American people, and particularly for the praiseworthy object of raising funds to aid the oppressed and gallant Greeks. It must be gratifying to every bosom that cherishes as it ought warm feelings for the liberty of mankind, and a just abhorrence of the cruelties that have been inflicted on the oppressed Greeks and the patriots of Spain. It will have another good effect. It will keep alive in the recollection of this nation what gallant men can do when united, and act as a stimulant to others to brave deeds should our country be again invaded by a foreign enemy."

On the day he dated the letter from which is taken the preceding quotation, the general had been presented with the pistols which had been given by LaFayette to Washington. He thus expresses what he felt on the occasion:

"I view as the highest honor that could be paid me, to be considered worthy by the representatives of that immortal man, the father of his country, to be a fit repository for the implements of national independence and liberty. It is more gratifying to my feelings than all the honors my country has hitherto bestowed on me."

Mr. Butler lost by death a lamented brother and the following is the letter of condolence written by the stern warrior on the occasion:

"WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 12, 1824.—My dear E.: Your letter of the 7th inst. has come to hand, announcing the death of my young friend and your much-lamented brother. Mrs. Jackson and myself tender to you what we sensibly feel—our sincere condolence on this occasion. When death comes he respects neither age nor merit; he sweeps from this earthly existence the sick and the strong, the rich and the poor, and should teach us to live to be prepared for death. Our deceased friend was a youth of great promise, snatched from us at an interesting period of life, and when we least expected it, thereby showing us the great uncertainty of all things; but we have a hope that he is removed from all the troubles of this world to a blissful state of immortality in the next; and we are taught by the scripture to mourn not for the dead, but for the living.' He is gone—our tears can not restore him, and let us be consoled in the hope that he is at rest and happy in the arms of our crucified Savior. Another consolation may be derived from the letter you have inclosed me, stating that whatever could be done during his illness for his relief and preservation was cheerfully extended. Be, therefore, consoled; you have many sincere friends and some dear relatives, and, although you have experienced the loss of many, still your misfortunes are not greater than those which befall others. You should remember, too, that to be reconciled with our lot is a duty we owe not less to ourselves than to that God to whose providence we are all committed. Against His will it is vain to repine, however, trying the affliction or great the burden, while calm submission to that will makes human fortitude triumph over the grave, and conducts us to those happy regions in which we love to believe our young friend immortal. At the same time we are aided in preparation to overtake him there. ANDREW JACKSON."

The following letter will be read with interest, in view of the action taken subsequently by the writer, while as president of the United States he favored the removal of the Creeks beyond the Mississippi:

"HERMITAGE, Tenn., July 25, 1825.—DEAR E., From your letter I presume your southern tour has afforded you some amusement and much information. The scenes in Georgia give you a view of human nature under the influence of party excitement and selfish political views. The world had formed an exalted opinion of Governor Troup's talents, but I believe his late communications have shorn him of his character of high talents in public estimation, and of decorous deportment. His whole conduct of late has afforded evidence of derangement from some cause. He certainly never could have obtained the high standing for talents he had without possessing some merit, which his late communications appear to be entirely destitude of. Nobody did believe that the Indians had any intention of commencing hostilities on the whites. The whole excitement was produced by designing white men to draw the public attention from the means used in obtaining this fictitious treaty, signed by one or two chiefs, and the rest self-created for the purpose of multiplying signers to the instrument. I am sure that, with the evidence now before the nation, the senate would not have ratified the treaty. What will be the course that will be taken will much depend on the information communicated to congress by the president, procured through his special agent, sent to the nation for the purpose of investigation. When it was ratified I was not in the senate, being confined to my room by the severe indisposition of Mrs. Jackson. Had I been present, seeing none of the old chiefs' names to it but McIntosh, I should have moved its postponement and called for information from the president. ANDREW JACKSON."

In another communication of 10th November, same year, he resumes the subject:

"I regret that my friend General Gaines permitted himself to be drawn into a political newspaper controversy with Governor Troup. However justifiable his conduct may be in this affair, still it will afford Troup's friends in congress a strong ground to assail the general as a military man—and it is to be tested how far the executive will sustain him should his own popularity be in the least endangered thereby." He then expresses the hope that the executive will stand by General Gaines, but he remarks: "He (General Gaines) and myself have had sufficient experience to know, unless shielded by positive instruction, that the executive will shield itself from responsibility if it can and throw it upon its subordinate. I hope my fears for the general may be groundless, still I can not but feel for the safety of my friend, when I see the avenue through which he may be assailed and his feelings corroded by congress."

Andrew Jackson, on the 8th of December, reverting to the same theme, in which he seemed to take so deep an interest, wrote:

"I am happy to be informed that the president has refused to listen to the demand of the governor of Georgia for the arrest of General Gaines, and I hope the treaty with the Indians for all the lands within the limits of Georgia will put to rest this disagreeable subject, the discussion of which would have involved some of the most delicate questions that could be brought before congress, and is well calculated to disturb the harmony of our country, as well as the feelings of our friend, General Gaines, who would, no doubt, have been assailed by his enemies in congress. State rights and military despotism are themes where eloquence can be employed and the feelings of the nation aroused. I fondly hope that, in consequence of the treaty you mention, both these themes will slumber for some other occasion."

Here is an extract of a letter dated in 1825:

"I am happy to find that you approve of my retiring from political life. My judgment said it was proper to do so. I have always thought it wrong to recommend maxims to others that I did not practice on myself. I am getting too old to abandon a course I have practiced upon through a long life. My judgment proved and dictated the course I have taken. It is a great pleasure to me that it is approved by the virtuous and good. I feel, regardless of what my political enemies may say on the subject, they would rejoice if I was to do an act injurious to those republican maxims I have always advocated."

On the 24th of January, 1826, he wrote:

"There never ought to be confidence reposed in political men who are in pursuit of popularity, particularly when they have given evidence of abandonment of principle and bartered for self-aggrandizement."

"Better Stop Dat Shoutin."

From the Lumpkin Independent.

There was on exhibition in front of this office yesterday the stuffed skin of a monster rattlesnake which was killed one night this week on Dr. J. K. Barnum's plantation. During religious services at one of the houses two negroes who were sitting on a fence heard the "singing" of the snake as they termed it. Shouting was going on at the meeting, but the irreverant darkies shouted out: "You'd better stop dat shoutin' and come out here and kill dis rattlesnake!" The meetin broke up instanter and the snake was killed. He measured fully six feet in length, was as large around as the calf of a man's leg and his tail was adorned with fourteen rattles and the customary button. He was full of years and "pizen."

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other auses. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

DEAD RIVER CHURCH.

Interesting Reminiscences of Telfair County Forty Years Ago.

From the Eastman Times.

SPRING HILL, August 15.—In speaking of the Rev. J. G. Ryals, we stated that at one time he had 75 or 80 members at Dead river church. We will now add that at least sixty of those members were baptized into the church by him. He was very zealous, and preached with great power during the three years of his ministry in this county. The people from the whole surrounding country turned out to his appointments. His congregations were always large, and everybody loved to hear him preach. It was with general regret when in 1866 he left for his home in Cartersville. We regret to say that preaching was kept up only a few years at Dead river after he left. A few years ago Rev. W. L. Geiger organized a Baptist church at Long Pond, and a great many of the Dead river members took their letters to that church. Some moved away, and others died. Our uncle, T. B. Conner, lives near Dead river church, and his membership is still there. He was born in 1798, and is the only living son of Rev. Wilson Conner. His wife was born in 1809, and is a member with her husband. They keep house pretty much alone—have a grand son only 12 or 14 years old living with them. In 1836 or '37 an academy was built in 200 yards of Dead river church by uncle Joseph Ryals, George W. Cooper and others. Rev. J. G is uncle Joseph's only son. Uncle Joseph lived near the academy, and had six daughters—four of whom have long since died and left families. Dr. P. H. Mell, who is chancellor of the State university, at Athens, taught the first school in the academy. He married his first wife in the house now occupied by uncle T. B. Conner. He visited that neighborhood several months ago, and asked to be presented with the bench, which is standing in uncle Tommie's piazza, because he said, on that bench he courted his first wife. He married Miss Lourane Cooper, grand daughter of Rev. Wilson Conner, and daughter of George W. Cooper, deceased, who moved to Screven county forty years ago. Dr. Mell preached an interesting sermon at Dead river on his last visit, and stated it was, in all probability, his last sermon there. He is 68 years old, and still stands very erect. He bids fair to be useful as an educator and pastor several years yet. Rev. T. B. Cooper, of Screven, is a brother of Dr. Mell's first and present wife. He is a graduate of Mercer, and we believe he is sixty years old. He is said to be a capital preacher. In the spring of 1844 Mr. John McCall moved with his wife and family and several servants from Telfair county, to live in the Dead river academy. His purpose was to live there and make a crop, and then move to some other destination in the fall. He and my father, J. B. Ryals, were fast friends, and very fond of hunting. Each one of them had a pack of hounds, and they were with them in the chase nearly every day; but to the sorrow of the whole neighborhood father accidently shot and killed Mr. McCall in one of their drives in the month of July of that year. Mr. M. was put to a stand, which he left when the deer did not go there, and got in thick bushes ahead of the dogs, and father seeing the bushes shake, shot and killed McCall. Frank McCall, brother of John, went down and took the family away, and we believe the widow died soon afterwards. Mr. John F. McCall's remains were interred at Dead river. A few months previous to the death of Mr. McCall, father's sister Penelope, wife of James G. Conner, who was the eldest son of Rev. Wilson C., was found dead in a branch. She had visited the family of James Pittman, on horseback, a mile from home, and on her return fell from the horse. It was not known whether the horse threw her or whether her death was brought about from other causes. Uncle Jimmy was on the road from Savannah at the time, and did not reach home in time to see her buried. A year or more, after her death, he married Miss Nancy Pittman, and in less than a year after their marriage, and in the absence of uncle Jimmy, she was found dead early one morning by the family, in bed. It was supposed that apoplexy caused her death. Uncle Jimmy did not witness the death of either one of his wives. He never married again, and died at the age of 85 years.

IN THE WILD WEST.

The Latest Adventures of the Presidential Party—A Remarkable Fishing.

By Special Arrow to the New York Journal.

SCALP NECK, August 13.—President Arthur and party arrived here by the way of Crow Foot hollow, at sixteen minutes past nine this morning. The party, and the president especially, show signs of wear. They have been riding over dizzy mountain passes for two days, sleeping wherever and whenever they could get a chance, which wasn't often. Senator Vest is the most unruly one of the company, and is in the habit of getting off his mule and fishing for eels in every mud puddle he passes. Surrogate Rollins has humorously named him the "the wild Vest." The president smiles in a dubious way every now and then, and tries to instil his followers with confidence, but it is very plain that he wishes himself well out of here.

As we progress the Indians seem more numerous, and their conduct, to say the least, is extraordinary. President Arthur has named his mule "Old Probabilities," because it is probable that before the journey is at an end he'll fall over a precipice. The president is very talkative, especially when it begins to get dark, when he insists that everybody shall have something to say. He remarked last night that if he had any idea that America was "so thundering big," he never would have entered the presidential chair. Surrogate Rollins and Senator Vest had a little unpleasantness this afternoon. They were both fishing in "Owl-eyed Gulch," a terrible neighborhood for respectable people to be in, and got a bite at the same moment. It was a desperate race to see which of them would land his fish first, and as they jerked their trophy to the surface it was discovered that they had both caught their hooks in an old hoopskirt. The surrogate, whose mind during the last few days seems to run on murder, was much alarmed at the circumstance, and is confident that the hoopskirt is evidence of some dark and horrible mystery. Senator Vest thinks it a good joke and accuses Rollins of throwing the hoopskirt in the water on purpose to scare everybody.

"One-legged Pete," the veteran guide in those parts, led the way around the mountain pass to this place. The trip was terribly hazardous, but Pete didn't seem to mind it in the least. He sat on his mule with his one leg trailing the ground, and was very eloquent in pointing out the beauties of the surrounding scenery.

"There's a sight fit ter blind yer peepers," he exclaimed, pointing to a towering flight of rock in the distance.

"It's wonderful!" said the president.

"Gorgeous!" shouted Senator Vest.

"Delightful!" echoed Surrogate Rollins.

"Well," growled Pete, looking upon his frightened followers, none of whom had raised his eyes from the perilous path beneath, "it's all wa-ll enough for you fellers to git off them dodblasted high tone remarks; but why don't yer look over whar I'm p'intin'? Yer can't see nothin' watchin' the backs of them thar mules!"

"My friend," said the president, in a conciliatory tone, "we'll look when we get at the bottom of this hill."

"Murder!" cried Senator Vest, who was in the rear.

"Good gracious, Rollins, what's that?" asked the president.

"I don't know," replied the surrogate, turning very pale, "but I guess Vest has fallen into the chasm."

"Mercy on me! I hope not. Look around and see."

"I can't look around," said Mr. Rollins. "The insides of my legs feel as though they'd been scraped raw, and its as much as I can do to sit on this infernal mule without turning around. You look yourself."

"Not much," said the president, "I've got the whole United States on my shoulders, and if anything were to happy to me there is no telling what might take place."

"I wish," gasped Surrogate Rollins, as his mule dropped his foot over the side and came near going over altogether—"I wish somebody would come and take my place."

"Hurray," shouted Senator Vest. "I came near losing my hat, but I caught it on the fly."

"Plague on that man!" growled the president, "he'll have us all killed yet. I thought he was in Kingdom Come by this time."

"Three cheers for the United States!" yelled Senator Vest, whose patriotic emotions were fully aroused by the grandeur of the surroundings.

"Mr. Vest," said the president, sternly, "I wish you would stop making so much noise. This country is alive with Indians."

"Who cares?" shouted Mr. Vest. "One senator wiped out by a tribe of Indians. Hooray!"

Just then the crack of a rifle brought the party to a standstill, and it was lucky that they did stand still, for the next moment there was a crumbling of a crag overhead and then a tremendous fall over the pathway into the abyss beneath. It was a narrow escape for the party, and when they reached the terminus of the pass they dismounted and partook of a glass of claret all round. When the party reached this place a tent was pitched and all hands turned in. The president is terribly sunburned. Senator Vest sat most of the night playing poker with one of the Indian guides, and was diplomatic enough to permit the redskin to win $7 of his hard-earned money.

WOMEN OF THE WORLD.

MISS LUCY LARCOM, the poet, lives at Beverly Farms, Mass.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY is in Scotland, the guest, near Edinburgh, of MRS. B. P. Nichols.

THE princess of Wales has aroused the indignation of the English milliners by the extreme plainness of her hats.

MRS. HAYES is working a book-mark for President Arthur, to reward him for refusing to travel on Sunday.

MISS CATHARINE L. WOLFE, the "American Baroness Burdett-Coutts," is building a half-million-dollar residence at Newport.

MRS. ANNA DEWITT REED, of New York, has presented a portrait of General James Reed, of the revolutionary war, to the state of New Hampshire.

MISS ELIZABETH STUART PHELP'S, summer home is beautifully situated on Eastern Point, facing Gloucester harbor, Mass., not far from Cape Ann lighthouse.

ONE of the men who knew it all rather took away Miss Georgia Cayvon's breath in the Luxemburg gallery the other day by explaining to her that a certain picture of Christ and the Magdalen was "our Lord pardoning the adulterated woman."

"I AM so glad," she said, soulfully, as she crossed her dainty, slippered feet and glanced down the broad hotel piazzas, conspicuously devoid of men of the eligible order; "I am so glad the Lord knows where the men are; I am sure no one else does."

A PRETTY Philadelphian at Cape May, who without positively aping the English women, resembles them considerably, received a neat compliment the other day, when a veritable Britain eye-glassed her shapely, well-dressed form from a distance and remarked: "She is my countrywoman, idealized, beautified."

MISS MARY M. CAREY, young, fair and gentle employed by the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba railroad at Nazata, as depot and express agent. She has charge of yard work and signals around the station. She is at her post from 6 a. m. to 10 p. m. much of the time. She is respected by all and understands her duties thoroughly. She is the eldest of four orphanf girls, who live and keep house together.

THE schoolmaster is very much abroad in Saratoga. One lady, blushing with diamonds, sent an order to her milliner as follows: "Deer Miss X—: Please get for me two yards of Iryish point lais and alsou get me six pares of glubs, sevens and a quraters, crushed-rose-berri s color. P. S.—Don't send the Bill for I don't want—to see it, he only alouse me a certing summ and I will pay it myself.'

THE CURRENT NORTH.

AS OUTLINED BY AN OBSERVANT TRAVELER.

A Feeling That a Change is upon the Country, and that it is Well it Should be So—Tilden and Lincoln Believed to be the Possibilities—Reasons Therefor—The Tariff Question, Etc.

Special to The Constitution.

NEW MILFORD, Pa., August 17.—Wandering from lake to lake among the green hills of Pennsylvania and New York, my time and thoughts have been given to more inviting subjects than the struggles of politicians. A two pound bass or pickerel, even if it was in the deep blue water and disdained a grasshopper or a live minnow, has been for a month more to me than a tariff discussion even from a free-trade standpoint. The weather has not been without interest; the cool hemlock forests of these rugged counties have wooed me, and the fruitful farms, and streams and numerous lakes have completed the job of transforming a worn and weary scribbler into a vigorous and successful tramp.

But still I have not been able to avoid all political discussions and impressions, and such as have been thrust upon me, such as float in this northern air and permeate these northern homes, I propose to report to you. These views come from men who do not make politics their trade; men who care more for good government than the mere success of any party; men of the better sort; men, too, who must in these times be consulted if success is to follow at the polls.

The republicans of this class have surprised me in one respect. They feel that a change in the control of the government is upon us, and they are not grieved thereat. They see no disaster in it to the banks, or the currency, or the factories, or the negro. It is perhaps best, they say, that there should be a change. This may spring from an acceptance of the inevitable; but I am inclined to think that they are tired of corruption, and are willing to swap it for bourbonism or any of the other things that have in the past alarmed their souls; that they are beginning to think that even the payment of the confederate bonds would be less costly than the pension grabs and the army of plunderers.

The depression in trade, which can be easily traced to the over-production on the one hand and the distressing burdens on the other of the present tariff, is telling heavily against the party that made and maintains it. Even the eyes of the mill-owners are being opened to the dangers of the false system, and the operatives also begin to see that it does not do all it was advertised to do. If the present dullness lasts until the presidential election, even the predicted democratic blunders will not suffice to compass a democratic defeat.

Whatever the cause there is no mistaking the fact that very many intelligent republicans are not averse to a change. Very few of them will vote for the democratic candidate; but if this revolution in sentiment does not operate to keep many of them at home on election day, I shall be greatly mistaken. The republicans will have to put forward men of undoubted merit and popularity, and redouble their efforts, if they get out a good vote. The machine leaders have no use for such nominees, and the stay-at-home vote becomes beyond a doubt an important factor in the coming contest.

THE PROBABILITIES.

There is a wide-spread feeling or fear in the republican ranks that Mr. Arthur will force his own nomination. Men who say he is a surprisingly good president, and that he has cleverly consolidated the party—these men fear that this most excellent man will work the southern delegations for all they are worth, and become the candidate of "the grand old party." No matter how much democratic villainy he may defeat next winter by the refusal of his official signature, these republicans see that their party is not intelligent enough to come up to the polls to reseat the man that was the choice of both Conkling and Guiteau.

The real earnest republicans say that the best and most popular man of the party must be put forward next year; and I have heard but two names mentioned in this connection in a month of travel. The nomination of Senator Edmunds would suit these eastern republicans very well; they regard him as a great senator; but they doubt his availability. He lives in a small state that has never wavered and never will. He has no popular qualities, and worse than all, his nomination would cross the temperance sentiment of the country. The Vermont senator is not a strict prohibitionist in practice. And a wayfarer in these states—or any state, for that matter—cannot escape the conviction that the sentiment against the evil of intemperance is very deep and earnest. The republican party will not care to breast it in any respect. They will scarcely care to take the chances of denouncing any stories that might arise about their candidate's habits as campaign lies. I find that the earnest republicans are therefore turning towards a powerful name borne by a young man in the west. It is indeed doubtful as to how so plain a case of the "son" business in politics would work; but with that I have nothing to do.

The situation after all seems to me to be briefly this: if the real leaders of the party conclude that the party can win, they will take steps to secure the nomination of Robert Lincoln, or some other available man. This would be a sure indication of a campaign in which money and patronage and the tariff and the monopolies, and favors to come will be utilized as they have never been before—which is saying a great deal. It will be a desperate last-ditch campaign in that event on the republican side. But it seems far more probable that the leaders will read the handwriting on the wall before the convention meets, and will give Mr. Arthur a walk-over in the convention, on the ground that he has done well and deserves the nomination. His nomination means a walk-over for the democrats, no matter what this or that college professor may say, or how skillfully the office holders may present his claims.

On the democratic side the old ticket is universally accepted in these states. I have talked with men who could not find words strong enough four years ago to express their dislike of Mr. Tilden, and the last one of them now accepts the situation. They may still dislike the sage of Graystone, but they see that a party cannot be successfully conducted without concessions, and they are ready to make all that the case calls for. There will be no bolting in New York if the old ticket is nominated.

THE PROBLEM AHEAD.

But right here comes in the chief puzzle of the situation. Does Mr. Tilden want the nomination? Or is he simply holding matters in abeyance so that he can dictate the nomination of Hoadly or Cleveland or Hewitt or some other man whom he thinks can be elected, being content to go into history as the only man deprived of the presidency after an election by the people? As to his condition, mental or physical, there is no reasonable doubt. He is as capable of high trusts and responsibilities as he was eight years ago. The evidence on that point is conclusive. There is a total want of evidence as to his intention. It is freely conceded that neither Mr. McDonald nor Mr. Bayard nor any other man, can get the nomination if Mr. Tilden wants it. Does he want it? I think he does. He has many great qualities—clearness and breadth of vision, a comprehensive knowledge of the American people, patient endurance under misrepresentation and faith in public sentiment, the knack of defining an issue in the right way at the right time, but he has never been regarded as particularly unselfish. In a word, he is preparing the way not for some other man, but for himself. The wish may be father to the thought in my mind, but I cannot guess the puzzle in any other way. The people want him, and if they get him, the political crime of the century will be redressed at last.

But would it not be very queer to elect Mr. Randall speaker in 1883, if we expect to make Mr. Tilden president in 1884? Mr. Tilden is a revenue-tariff man, a democrat only. He ran as a revenue-tariff man in 1876. The people are doing more thinking over the tariff question now in one year than they did in the twenty years that followed the outbreak of the civil war, and they are not going over to the protection side if my eyes and ears serve me correctly.

JUDGE BLACK AND JEFF DAVIS.

General Johnston Smiles a Smile of Scorn at His Former Chief.

ALTOONA, August 18.—General Joseph E. Johnston, the confederate general, is at Bedford springs. He is modest, unassuming and courteous, and in conversation one can scarcely realize that he is talking to the conferate general who disputes with Lee for the position of the greatest solder that the south produced during the late war. General Johnston is five feet eight and one-half inches in height, weighs 160 pounds, and is erect and slender in stature. He has gray beard and hair and wears a black cloth suit and straw hat. Though seventy-six years of age, he looks ten years younger, and talks and moves like a man of forty or fifty.

In an interview with a reporter of the Bedford Republican to-day, the general says there was no call for the letter of Jefferson Davis in what Judge Black had written. It was incomprehensible to him how Mr. Davis could make the statement that if there had been no attempt to reinforce Fort Sumter there would have been no secession.

General Johnston said that he supposed that there was not a schoolboy in the north or south who did not know better. He said Jefferson Davis was not a great writer, as he permitted his feelings to influence him, and serenely smiled at the idea of Jeff being a match for Jeremiah with the pen.

NEGRO AT TABLE.

The Police Court of Washington Decide a Novel Civil Rights Case.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—A decision was rendered by Judge Mills in the police court of this city to-day, in the civil rights case of Rev. George H. Smith, (colored,) of Norwich Connecticut, against James W. Bell, proprietor of the restaurant on Pennsylvania avenue. The ground of the complaint was that Bell had denied the accommodations of the business restaurant to the plaintiff on account of the latter's color and suit was brought to enforce the criminal provisions of the act of March 1st, 1875. The court holds that under the common law, an inn keeper is bound to take in and receive all travelers and wayfarers, and by the act of March 1, 1875, it is made a demeanor to discriminate against a traveler on account of race and color, regardless of any previous condition of servitude. A restaurant keeper had the right to establish certain regulation as to hours for meals, and to designate certain places or seats for customers, but such hours and meals must be the same for all, or if any discrimination be made, it must be made upon the same principle, or for some reason that the law recognizes as just and reasonable, and not on account of color, race or previous condition of servitude. All the guests of an inn or restarant must be given equal privileges, and the places designated for them must be accessible to all respectable persons at a uniform rate of charge. From these principles, it follows that the defendant, in discriminating against the complainant, Smith, on account of his race and color, was guilty of a misdemeanor, and incurred the penalty prescribed by the second section of the civil rights act of 1875. Judgment was rendered accordingly. This case is in some respects a novel one, since it is the first attempt to enforce the penalty under the second section of the civil rights act, which makes a violation of the law a misdemeanor, and it is the first effort made to enforce the criminal provisions of the law in a territory where the congress of the United States has exclusive and absolute legislative jurisdiction.

THE DEFEATED STRIKERS.

They Attribute Their Discomfiture to the Neglect of the Knights of Labor.

PITTSBURG, Pa., August 18.—Secretary Hughes says he has notified all the assemblies to return to work in accordance with the telegram from John Campbell. In regard to the sudden collaps of the strike, he was very reticent, but said he was satisfied the strike was a failure after the third day. The members of the brotherhood attribute the defeat to the Knights of Labor, who, they say, failed to give them the support they had promised.

In an interview with an associated press representative to-night, Thomas H. Hughes, grand secretary of the brotherhood of telegraphers, speaking of the collaps of the strike said: The condition of the strike in many sections especially in Quebec and the south, demoralized the strike at many other points. Members were in want of necessities. Rents were due with threatened eviction. Money was coming in slowly. Philadelphia and other eastern points were short of funds, and it was impossible to hold New York city longer. The charge by some that John Campbell sold the organization out is a most unjust and unwarranted one.

CHICAGO REMAINS ON THE STRIKE.

CHICAGO, August 18.—At a meeting, attended by between 450 and 500 telegraphers yesterday, Master Workman Morris declared that he would not indors the advice of Mr. Campbell, and would not advise a surrender. If they chose to give in he would resign and have nothing further to do with the brotherhood. He asserted that the west has shown no signs of weakening, but the east had not been displaying the firmness expected. With the cooperation of other large western cities be believed the contest could be prolonged to a stage where the company would have to recognize their bill of rights. Telegrams of Cincinnati, Cleveland and St. Louis were read alleging that the strikers in those cities would not recognize Campbell's circular. The session was brought to a close by a rising vote to continue the fight.

The striking telegraph operators kept applying for work at the office of the Western Union in small squads up to 1 o'clock to-day when a stampede occurred, and from that on till a late hour this afternoon the hallway leading to the office of Superintendent Tubbs was crowded. A number of those applying were refused places for reasons best known to the officials.

THE RUSH FOR PLACES.

NEW YORK, August 18.—The main office of the Western Union telegraph company was besieged from an early hour this morning by nearly one hundred operators, seeking reinstatement. But few women and girls were among the number. Superintendent Hunstone was busily engaged in discriminating between applications from first class workmen and those who were considered second and third rate. Only the best workmen are being taken back and a number of operators were disappointed by being rejected. Those operators who were taken on after the strike commenced will be retained by the company in their present positions. Since the strike was declaired ended yesterday afternoon, only twelve women had been received back into the employ of the company. The total number of women who have applied for reinstatement is over 45, so that 33 of that number are left without work. Superintendent Humstone said that forty-five men were taken back yesterday afternoon and evening. About thirty more first-class men were reinstated this morning. He said that all of the branch offices would be open for business by Monday morning, and that everything would be in perfect working order by that time. He could not promise that the company would find positions for all the operators, but he thought that a large number of them would be compelled to seek positions elsewhere, as the company could not in justice to itself discharge those operators who stood by it in its difficulties.

A PITIFUL TALE.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—The striking telegraphers of this city, called upon Manager Clark this afternoon, acknowledged the failure of the strike and asked to be reinstated. Mr. Clark informed them that all the first call vacancies had been filled, that although he might need a few low priced men, he could not yet say anything definite about it. There were no vacancies for linemen.

JAY GOULD'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

He Denies That He Has Been Bearing the Villard Stocks.

NEW YORK, August 18.—The Mail and Express, Cyrus W. Field's paper, prints the following: Mr. Jay Gould authorized a positive announcement that he had not been directly or indirectly interested in the late depression of the Villard stocks. This statement was made definitely, emphatically, and with knowledge that it would be published.

This is a very important announcement. The street has believed almost to a man that the attack on the Villard stocks has been inspired, if not directed, by Mr. Gould. The common supposition has been that Mr. Gould has been short of Northern Pacific stocks for a long time, and has lately covered. It is quite generally believed that Mr. Gould made a private settlement of shorts in Villard stocks yesterday. Mr. Gould's statement upsets all these theories.

The question remains: What has caused the severe decline in Northern Pacific and Oregon Transcontinental? Taking Mr. Gould out of the calculation, this question is much easier asked than answered. The strongest houses in the country are identified with the Northern Pacific property. It is a time when friends of the company interested either in stock or bonds would wish to have the road appear prosperous and the securities popular. There has been a great deal said about a boom in the Villard stock by way of celebrating the opening of the road. Friends of the property could scarcely have consented to bearish manipulation of the price at this time.

It has been suggested that the fund out of which Northern Pacific preferred has been bought so long has become exhausted. Other explanations have been advanced, but the fact seems to be that Mr. Gould's denial transforms what has been considered a plain stock jobbing move into a mystery of considerable proportions.

Testing Hostetter's Bitters.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—Commissioner Evans has not yet been able to make up his mind whether Hostetter's bitters is really a medicinal preparation or only a tipple in disguise. Although he is a temperance man, the commissioner, prompted by the spirit of investigation and inspired by unselfish devotion to official duty, procured a bottle of the compound and fearlessly drank a glass of it, in order to test its effects upon the human system. Mr. Evans survived the ordeal and is still able to attend to his official duties, but that he was not satisfied with the results of his experiments is shown by the fact that he sent the remainder of the bottle to a government chemist and officially requested him to subject it to a thorough chemical analysis and report the result. The chemist has not yet sent in his report, and in the meantime Commissioner Evans politely but firmly declines to say whether in his opionion the stuff is a medicine or a beverage.

Judge Black Improving.

YORK, Pa., August 18.—The condition of Judge Jere S. Black, which has been critical, causing much uneasiness among his friends, is greatly improved. Dr. Garnett, of Washington, D. C., performed an operation this morning which has been entirely successful. He expresses the opinion that the judge will recover. Telegrams of sympathy from all parts of the country have been received.

To night Judge Black's condition is very much improved. His severe illness was caused by an unusually enlarged prostate gland and stricture of the neck of the bladder producing complete occlusion, which stubbornly resisted ordinary appliances. The trouble began on Sunday night, since when three operations have been performed, the first two giving but temporary relief. About noon to-day a radical operation for permanent relief was successfully performed.

There is little change in the condition of Judge Black since last evening. His physicians report very slight improvement, but the case is still precarious.

A Cashier's Mistake.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, August 18.—Kirkland M. Fitch, cashier of the Second National bank of Warren, which failed yesterday, confesses that he has lost eighty thousand of the bank's funds in stock speculations during the past ten months. The bank will pay the depositors in full, and 30 or 40 per cent on the capital stock.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

NEW CASES DEVELOPING IN PENSACOLA.

Dispatches Announcing the Fact Received at the Naval Department—Illness of the Doctors—Measures Taken to Protect Pensacola by Quarantine and Patrol—Etc.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—A telegram was received at the navy department to-day from Pensacola, but as it related to departmental matters, Commodore English declined to make it public. He said, however, that new cases were reported. Surgeon Owen, who is stationed at the yard, was ill. In the first despatch announcing the appearance of yellow fever at Pensacola, the inference was that he was stricken with that disease, but no definite information to that effect has been received at the department. A telegram received this morning says that Surgeon Owen is still ill.

UNDER QUARANTINE.

Pensacola was immediately directed by the acting secretary of the treasury to employ ten patrolmen to aid the board of health in maintaining the quarantine. The collector last night reported that forty men would be required for service, as the patrol line was five miles in length. The surgeon general, with the approval of acting secretary French, to day telegraphed to the collector as follows: "On the filing of an affidavit by the mayor of the city and the president of the board of health, that they are unable to employ a sufficient quarantine force, employ as many as necessary at the prices named in your telegram, (Partolmen $2 per day.)

Tents and disinfectants were shipped to-day from New Orleans. The medical officer at New Orleans, passed Assistant Surgeon Godfrey, was instructed by telegraph as follows: Ship immediately to the collector of customs, Pensacola, Florida, six hospital tents and fixtures, six barrels of brimstone and two barrels of corperas." President Guttman, of the Pensacola board of health, was also telegraphed as follows:

"I advise another house to house inspection, to commence immediately, not that Pensacola appears in material danger if the quarantine is enforced, but to make certain that the city is free from fever.

THE REPLIES.

The following replies were received by Surgeon-General Hamilton: "Pensacola, Fla., August 18.—Telegram received. Affidavits filed and forwarded. Guard placed on duty this evening." (Signed) J. M. Tarble, collector of customs. "Pensacola, Fla., August 18.—Would like to carry out your advices, but the board is without means. City perfectly healthy. (Singed) John B. Guttman, president board of health.

DISTINCTION WITHOUT MUCH DIFFERENCE.

PENSACOLA, Fla., August 18.—There is no yellow fever at Pensacola. There has been one death at the navyyard which is seven miles from here. Surgeon Owen and his son, and a marine are sick, it is supposed with yellow fever. A cordon has been established around the navy yard on land and water, which makes the citizens of Pensacola feel perfectly secure. There is no alarm whatever felt here. No one is leaving the city from fear of the disease.

GLADSTONE DENOUNCES HEALY

And Healy Replies in a Speech Defiant and Bitter—Other News.

LONDON, August 18.—During the session of the house of commons to-day, Mr. Gladstone took occasion to rebuke what he termed the "habitual violence" of language used by Mr. Healy, home ruler member for Monaghan county. He said Mr. Healy's utterances deserved the severest reprobation, as they were calculated to stimulate national hatred which it has been his (Mr. Gladstone's) desire to mitigate, and, if possible, extinguish. He regretted that Mr. Healy had pleaded the wrongs of Ireland as an excuse for his remarks. While Mr. Gladstone was speaking he was frequently interrupted by Mr. Biggar, home ruler member for Cavan county. The chairman finally notified Mr. Biggar that if he did not desist from his interruptions he would name him to the house. Mr. Healey, in responding to the remarks of Mr. Gladstone, was very defiant. He declared that there was a state of war between England and Ireland, which would become physical warfare if the Irish had the power to engage in a struggle. Ireland, he said, wanted justice and not appeals to fine sentiment.

THE EARTHQUAKE COUNTRY.

ROME, August 18.—The Papal Romana, newspaper, says that the town of Casamicciola, on the island of Ischia, which was recently destroyed by earthquake, is rapidly being rebuilt. Already one hundred and fifty four wooden houses have been erected and occupied. It has been decided to name the streets in the town after the king and queen of Italy. At Foria, another of the desolated towns, houses have been erected for the accommodation of fifty-two families.

A STRANGE VESSEL.

COPENHAGEN, August 18.—The Russian geographical society has notified the Danish minister at St. Petersburg that a foreign vessel is reported to have wintered on the last coast of the island of Waigatz, which lies between Nova Zembla and the Russian mainland. It is not known whether the vessel was the missing Danish Artic exploring ship Djmphna.

SUPPRESSING PAPERS.

CAIRO, August 18.—The government intends to suppress the Egyptian Gazette on account of its having printed satirical articles on the ministers. Four native papers which have also been printing objectionable articles have been warned that their publication will be suspended if they continue to print offensive articles.

A PHILADELPHIA ROMANCE.

Heirs to a Fortune Found in Low Life by Secretary Teller's Sister.

PHILADELPHIA, August 18.—This city has been the scene of a strange romance in real life, in the plot of which the tragic elements of love, suicide, murder and desertion were interwoven. The romance ends dramatically with the triumph of the good over the bad and a poor widow's unexpected accession to comparative wealth.

On Saturday last Mrs. Cody, a venerable, white-haired sister of the secretary of the interior, came to this city from Denver in search of the wife and children of a son of David Scanlon, who died in Denver leaving property valued at $25 000. The only clue which the lady possessed as to their identity was that Scanlon had murdered his mother and afterwards killed himself while waiting trial. A search was made through the records of the court without revealing the name of Scanlon.

From the cororner's office Mrs. Cody went to the county jail, where she learned that a man named Davidson had murdered his mother and afterwards, in June, 1882, killed himself while awaiting his trial. No such name as Scanlon had been heard of by the prison officials. Subsequent investigation, however, proved that Davidson's real name was John Scanlon, and that he was the son of David Scanlon, of Denver. The wife and two sons of the murderer and suicide were then discovered without difficulty, and informed of their good fortune, very much to their astonishment.

David Scanlon was born in this country. Thirty-six years ago he went to Ireland and married a comely lass of Donegal, whom he soon afterwards brought back with him. Soon after reaching New York Scanlon deserted his young wife and drifted west. He finally settled in Denver, where by constant application to business he amassed a fortune, which he bequeathed at his death to charitable institutions. During these thirty-five years he never attempted to find the young wife he had left unprotected and penniless in a strange city. Two nephews, therefore, came forward and contested the will on the ground of insanity. Although it was believed that there were other heirs living, no tidings of them could be obtained, and the nephews were awarded the entire estate.

After Scanlon deserted his wife she came to this city and earned a living by peddling small wares. She waited several years for news of her truant husband, but finally concluded that he was dead and married a man named Davidson, who died about ten years ago. John, her son by Scanlon, took the name of his stepfather. As he grew up he began to drink heavily and formed bad associations. A few years ago he married a young woman in his own station in life and the couple lived with his mother. In his drunken fits he frequently beat his aged mother, his wife and his two children.

On the 4th day of May, 1882, the elder folks and the children were living huddled together in a miserably furnished third story attic in one of the worst parts of the city. Young Scanlon had been drinking heavily in the morning and the neghbors had heard him quarreling with his mother. When he returned to the garret shortly before dark he turned upon his mother and struck her in the face with his fist. The old woman picked up a chair to defend herself, but before she could use it Scanlon had snatched up a hatchet, and, rushing at her, he hit her a terrible blow with the butt-end on the top of the head. She fell to the floor insensible. Frenzied, Scanlon jumped upon the prostrate form and litterally beat the head to a jelly. He was arrested by two of the neighbors. He was committed to await a trial for murder. His suicide in his cell, which occurred on the afternoon of Monday, July 10, 1882, created the gratest surprise among the prison officials. After having first removed all his clothing, he hung himself by his red flannel shirt from the lower bar of his cell window.

Mrs. John Scanlon, when informed of the wealth that she had inherited, refused to believe the story, and treated it as a hoax. Last Monday evening Mrs. Cody and Mrs. Scanlon and one of her little boys left for Denver. Mrs. Scanlon carries with her the record of her mother-in-law's marriage in Ireland. The case comes up in the supreme court in Denver in September for final settlement.

THE DAY'S SPORTS.

The Events of the Turf at Saratoga—Monmouth Park and Brighton Beach.

SARATOGA, August 18.—The weather is cloudy. The attendance is very good and the track is fast. First race, three-quarters of a mile, for two year olds, was won by Tarquin Bob, May second, and Bridget third; time 1:17¼. The second race, two miles, for three-year olds, was won by George Kinney, Bessie second, and Tennyson third; time 3:38. The third race, one mile and a furlong, for all ages, was won by Ballard, Buccaneer second, and Gleaner third; time 2:05. The fourth race, three-quarter, resulted in a dead heat between Helen Wallace and Callao, Analasta third: time 1:17. Callao won the run off of the fourth race; time 1:17¾.

MONMOUTH PARK.

The first race, handicap sweepstakes for all ages, one mile and a furlong, was won by Charley Marks, Prim second, and Checkmate third. Time, 1:58¼. The second race, three-quarters of a mile, for two year olds Louisette won, Water Lily second, Cyclonette third. Time, 1:16½. The third race, omnibus stakes for yearlings of 1881, $100 each for starters, with $10 000 added: mile and a half; startes, Eolist, King, Earnest Mimi, Colt, Pazarro, Gonfalon and Drake Carter. Drake Carter took the lead at the start. Gonfalon challenged and headed him for a moment, on entering the mile, but Drake Carter soon shook him off and had the race. The fourth race 1 3 8 miles, Aranza won, Girafla second, Alla third. Time 2:23¾. The fifth race, ⅞ mile, selling allowances, Battledore won, Cheerful second, Chickadee third. Time 1:33¼. The sixth race, handicap steeple chase full course, Captain York won, Charlemague second, Lily Mereson third. Time 2:11.

BRIGHTON BEACH.

The first race, one mile and a half, over six hurdles; Major Wheeler won, Kate Corvin second, Paul Pry third. Time 2:58¾. The second race, Maria Lewis and Cyclone ran a dead heat, Mocco third. Time 1:47¾. The money was divided.

ON THE WATER.

BOSTON August 18.—The largest sailing regatta ever held in this country, and probably in the world, took place off Marblehead this afternoon, under the auspices of the Beverly yacht club. Of 237 yachts entered, 158 started. There were 114 starters in last year's regatta, which was the largest sailed up to that time.

BASEBALL.

RICHMOND, Va., August 18.—A very exciting game of baseball was played here to-day between the Trenton and Virginia inter-state association nines, resulting, after ten innings had been played, in a victory for the Trentons by a score of 7 to 3. The visitors made all their runs in the first and tenth innings.

From Rome, Ga.

Special to The Constitution.

ROME, August 18.—Bob White, driver of Carson's delivery wagon, had his right leg broken in two places to-day. In making a short turn the wagon was upset, throwing a heavy box on his leg, breaking it as stated.

Rome was visited to-day by a large party of beautiful ladies from Cave Spring. Most of the party were summer visitors, and came up to Rome just to see the beautiful place.

The adjuster for the Underwriters' insurance company arrived to-day, and after viewing the loss of Towers & Sullivan manufacturing company by the recent fire, at once gave a check for the amount of the policy held against his company.

The Rome express was rocked again to-night when within a few miles of Rome. One large rock thrown by the villain shattered a window all to pieces immediately in front of a lady passenger. All the passengers were much excited. This is the second occurrence of the same kind within the last four days.

A Lunar Rainbow.

KEENE VALLEY, Adriondacks, August 18.—This evening at 9 o'clock the guests of the Widow Beede house had the never-to-be-forgotton pleasure of seeing a moon rainbow. The evening has been showery with dense black clouds hanging low. Toward 9 the clouds at the south broke away, letting through the clear rays of the moon, now nearly full. The effect of a flood of moonlight on the sides of the northern mountains, still under dark, overhanging clouds, was grand beyond description. But the culminating beauty was reached when an arc of silvery white appeared in the north, gleaming out against an inky background. The bow was thrown completely across the valley, forming a glorious rainbow bridge between the mountains on opposite sides. It was of a uniform whitish color, showing none of the prismatic hues seen in the ordinary rainbow. The display lasted for about ten minutes, causing great excitement in the little knot of people who were fortunate enough to see it.

A Rag-Picker's Pocket.

CINCINNATI, August 18.—To-day a man 60 years of age, whose hair and beard were smeared with grease and whose clothing seemed a generation old, came into police headquarters and announced himself as M. L. Bloom, a rag picker, winding up by astonishing the detectives by declaring that his pocket had been picked last night by a man whom he had taken to his room of $1,300. The officers were put on the track of the supposed thief. Bloom's pocket was picked twenty-five years ago of $1,800 by a partner, and he never recovered it. He always kept his savings in his clothing.

Not Yet Accused of Murder.

NEWARK, August 18.—To-night the county physician was telegraphed from Caldwell that Mrs. Corcoran, who was so cruelly beaten by John Corcoran, her husband, was yet alive, but there were no hopes of her recovery. A protracted faint occasioned the report of her death yesterday afternoon. No charge of murder has been made against Corcoran, although the public prosecutor had written to the county physician that the woman was dead. Corcoran has been released on $2,500 bail to appear before the grand jury to answer a charge of atrocious assault and battery.

Holden Weary of Republicanism.

RALEIGH, N. C., August 18.—The News and Observer to-morrow will publish a card from ex-Governor William W. Holden, formally withdrawing from the republican party, and stating that he is not a member of the liberal party. Ex-Governor Holden has occupied a prominent place in state politics. He was for a long time editor of the Standard. He was appointed provisional governor and then elected governor. Being impeached he left the state and became one of the editors of the Chronicle at Washington, D. C. For the past ten years he has lived here in retirement.

Bullion and Coin.

LONDON, August 18.—The amount of bullion gone into the bank of England on balance to-day is £230,000.

NEW YORK, August 18.—The weekly statement of the associated banks issued from the clearing house to-day shows the following changes: Coins, increase, $2 484 600; specie, decrease $2,413,400. Legal tenders, decrease $441,200; deposits, decrease $1 602,300; circulation, increase $942,000; reserve, decrease $2,454,025. The banks now hold $6,879,630 in excess of legal requirements.

A Man With a Pin in His Throat.

PHILADELPHIA, August 18.—John Holmes, 21 years old, residing in Wilmington, Delaware, accidentally swallowed a pin yesterday afternoon. He and his friends made several ineffectual attempts to dislodge the object. He was sent to the Pennsylvania hospital in the evening and it was arranged that Dr. Levis should make an operation for the removal of the pin to-day, providing Holmes does not swallow it in the meantime.

Caterpillar and Worm.

COLUMBIA, S. C., August 18.—The cotton caterpillar has appeared on the neighboring plantations, and is boring the blooms badly. The leaves and bolls are also ravaged by the worms. Planters are making efforts to save the crop with Paris green and night lights. Sections of Sumter county also report damage from worms. The prospects are that much damage will be done.

A Luckless Fishing Cruise.

NEW YORK, August 18.—Richard and William Harris, two young men residing in Williamsburg, took a boat out to fish at Canarsie, L. I., to-day. William fell overboard and was drowned. Richard was so overcome at his brother's death that he made an attempt to strangle himself with the anchor rope, but was prevented by a fisherman who made his appearance.

Riot in Trieste.

VIENNA, August 18.—A mob paraded the streets in Trieste last evening crying: "Away with the Italians and foreigners," and "Evivva Austria." The rioters also attacked the Italian gymnasium and newspaper office. The riot grew out of the explosion of a petard at a fete in celebration of the name day of the emperor of Austria. The police arrested several of the rioters.

The Story of Fulford's Marriage and Domestic Life—Plans to Get Rid of His Sick Wife—Her Last Words—The Brutes Shot to Death—Full Particulars—The Wicked World.

From the Bainbridge Democrat.

About eight years ago Joseph Fulford, a youth just entering the estate of manhood, in the adjoining county of Miller, took to himself a wife in the person of Miss Mattie Franklin, a daughter of Mr. Jack Franklin, a poor but highly respected citizen of that county. Miss Franklin was at this time nearing the age of two score, but for all that the youthful husband appeared devoted to her for more than a year. The lady was the model housewife of the neighborhood, and her home was the subject of remark by all who entered it, on account of its tasteful arrangement, neatness and the general comfort pervading its every corner and apartment. In course of time, however, Joe Fulford, the husband, grew neglectful, indolent and thriftless; he drank excessively, and is reported to have frequently abused and beaten his wife. Thus things went on until June last, when the unhappy and ill-used wife was taken sick, and had since—up to Tuesday morning of August 7th—remained so. No children had blessed their union—a fortunate occurrence—since they too in all probability, would have been a victim with the unhappy wife—of the villainous and brutal husband's inhumanity.

Since June he has been more intolerable and neglectful than ever, and it is said that he left his sick wife entirely unattended on Friday, and remained away until Sunday evening—not leaving a drop of water or a morsel of cooked food on the premises—his wife at the time being unable to turn herself in bed even. A brother of the lady, however, happened to visit her, and found her in this condition. After this some one of her own family remained with her at night, but during the day she was left to the mercy of her brutal husband. On Monday night, her last night upon earth, a brother of the now dying lady remained with her, but left her after daylight, promising to return again at night. After he had gone Fulford also left and went to his father's, about a mile distant, as he was in the habit of doing, for his breakfast. Whilst there he exhibited great nervousness and apparent anxiety to return home, which he did as soon as he had eaten breakfast. Returning home, he employed two negro men, Harry Bradley and Reuben Robinson, who were passing along through the woods—by some fatuitous coincidence, to do a job for him. A bargain was quickly made and the three men entered the house—one of the negroes however, remaining at the door to watch. On entering the sick chamber of the almost dying woman she feebly inquired, "what are you going to do?" when the negro, Harry Bradley, struck her several crushing blows on the head with a club, which knocked her senseless. The negro then desisted, but Fulford seizing his insensible wife by the throat, sprang upon her chest with his knees, and after choking her breath out he stamped her breast with his shoe heels until life was extinct. The negroes were then dispatched for an ox cart, which was brought and the three carried the body out of the house and threw it into the cart. While the negroes were getting the cart, Fulford dressed the body of his dead wife. The three then left with the body—going through the woods, in company. They carried the body to Spring creek, one and a half miles distant, to a deep place called the Wash hole, and taking it from the cart carried it out on a log and sunk it in the deepest part. The trio then separated—Fulford returning home. Arriving there, he saddled and mounted his horse, and went to a neighbor's house, and being invited to dinner, dismounted, put up and fed his horse, entered the house, ate dinner and afterward turned a chair down in the piazza, lay down to rest. At this time he for the first time told his neighbors of the absence of his wife and remarked that he was afraid that "she had gone off and drowned herself." This report was immediately circulated through the neighborhood and a general search of the surrounding ponds and sloughs began, Fulford joining in the search. He, however, sought to divert the search from Spring Creek and resolutely refused to search in that direction. During all Tuesday evening and Wednesday he was extremely nervous and restless, and repeatedly sought to elude the strict surveillance underwhich his conduct and words had placed him. He more than once attempted to get on a horse, in order to escape, but his guards would not permit him. He slipped out the back door of his house and hadgotten off nearly a hundred yards once when he was halted and brought back. Soon after this a runner brought the intelligence that the body of the missing woman had been found, and upon hearing it Fulford absolutely refused to go to the place, but was forced to go in a buggy with two guards. Arriving at the creek the body—as it lay in the water in an upright attitude, the face just below the surface—he attempted a faint exhibition of grief, and remarked that he "would not have had it happened for five dollars." A water bucket was found setting on the bank of the creek, and the gourd discovered lodged against some bushes just below the spot where the dead woman was found, and a bonnet, belonging to the dead woman, was suspended from a branch near the bucket. These articles were placed thus to bolster up his story of her suicide by drowning, doubtlessly. The coroner immediately organized his court, and the investigation continued all night Wednesday night, and Thursday—when Harry Bradley, Reuben Robinson and a negro woman named Sukie Robinson—with whom, it is alleged, Fulford was on terms of criminal intimacy—were arrested on suspicion, the three having been heard to indulge in suspicious talk concerning the missing woman.

Soon after their arrest they were questioned, when the two negro men made a full confession of the particulars of the murder, from the time of Fulford's return from breakfast at his fathers' on Tuesday morning. The murderers and the woman were at once lodged in jail—after having been before the coroner's court as witnesses. The verdict of the coroner's jury was to the effect that the deceased lady came to her death at the hands of Joseph Fulford, Harry Bradley and Reuben Robinson, and that the three were guilty of willful murder.

It is proper to state in this connection that the tracks of the cart, the marks of violence upon the head, throat and breast of the dead woman—together with her being dressed as described by the confessors—all corroborated the confession exactly—although the negroes had neither seen the dead woman after the body was found nor heard any of the particulars of the discovery.

The horrible details of the crime had aroused the whole county and hundreds of people flocked to Colquitt on Friday to hear the comittment trial of the murderers. As the particulars of the tragedy became known the indignation of the crowd arose to fever heat, and at one time there was strong talk of chaining the three men to a stake on the court house square and burning them to cinders. Wiser counsels prevailed, however, and the trial proceeded. Night coming on a strong guard was placed around the jail.

ATTEMPTS TO LYNCH THE MURDERERS.

This guard was continued from night to night, and on Friday and Saturday nights parties of lynchers were hanging around the jail trying to force open the doors and get at the prisoners. They, however, failed to do so. It was reported all Saturday and Sunday that the lynchers had taken the prisoners from the jail on Friday night hanged them to a convenient limb and riddled their bodies with bullets—those bringing the reports affirming that they had seen parties who saw the dead bodies, and it was on this character of evidence that the daily press of the country was telegraphed of the lynching. On Monday morning of this week, however, news reached the city that the reported lynching was untrue and that the prisoners would be brought to this city for safe keeping if they could be gotten here alive. The day passed, however, without their arrival, and again the reports flew thick and fast that they had been lynched on Monday night. The first apparently well authenticated reports, however, having proven false, few persons believed this until yesterday morning, when parties from Colquitt who had talked with a physician who saw the prisoners on Tuesday and who gave their true condition.

SHOT TO DEATH.

The particulars of the lynching, so far as we have been able to gather them from the most reliable sources, are about these:

At 2 o'clock Tuesday morning a horseman dashed up to the jail, and engaging the attention of the guard, about seventy-five disguised men stole softly up to the jail, and seizing the guard, dispossessed him of his gun and placed him underguard. With crowbars and sledge hammers they then forced open the doors and entered the jail. Then, with the gun of the guard, shot and instantly killed Joe Fulford, the charge of buckshot passing entirely through his body. A pistol ball was also sent through his head and he fell dead without a struggle. They then shot Harry Bradley once in the head and once in the body, the first shot entering the mouth and the latter passing nearly through the body. He lived a short time only. Reuben Robinson was also shot in the right side and neck with a shotgun and pistol, and a man who saw him on Tuesday night said that he certainly died that night. The negro woman, Sukie Robinson, was discharged by the committing court.

This, in brief, is the history of the most atrocious and heinous crime that we have ever chronicled, and one, the like of which, God forbid we shall ever be called upon to chronicle again. As to the punishment meted out to the perpetrators we shall have little to say. That it was a just punishment all who read the above statement of facts must agree. That the perpetrators of the wrong, against the law of the state, are in a measure excusable, will be more apparent when the reflection is considered that only two years have elapsed since Mrs. Brocket was similarly murdered within five miles of where Mrs. Fulford was killed; and it was to the slow, tedious and uncertain law—as it is now administered by the courts, and meted out by the juries of the country to these murderers, that rendered their escape from punishment possible.

We are not an advocate of lynch law—on the contrary we would condemn in strongest terms its practice under almost all circumstances, but we, and society at large, will feel safer to know that if the juries of the country lack the manhood and moral courage to enforce law, justice and order, that there are those still left who can put them to blush and the quiet, determined, swift and sure administration of justice in such extremely atrocious cases as the two under consideration.

"MRS. ARA SMITH."

History of the Unfortunate Lady and Her Sad Death at Montgomery.

From the Macon Telegraph.

We have been placed in possession of the facts which led to the leaving of the unfortunate lady whose adopted name heads this article from the parental roof near Bolingbroke. They are published at the request of Mr. Julius H. Bazemore, her brother.

The Bazemore family is one that has been esteemed and respected in this section. The father, Thos. J. Bazemore, was one of the most honorable and respected citizens of this county, and not a blemish or stain was ever put on any of the family. The lady, whose sad death in Montgomery, Ala., has been published, was a daughter of this good old man. Her right and full name was Miss Aramiuta Viera Bazemore. She was welcomed in the best society and had scores of friends and admirers.

A man by the name of W. H. Dent, who had married her sister, sought and accomplished her ruin. Up to that time she was, being the youngest and the pet of the family, beloved by all who knew her. As soon as this was known, all relations with Dent were stopped and he would have been murdered but for the fact that the brothers knew that his death at their hands would be the ruin of the other sister, his wife.

The family, with many relatives, met in consultation as to what course should be pursued. They decided that the daughter should remain at home and that she, even in her downfall, still had a hold on their tenderest and strongest affections: but Miss Ara desired to leave home and begin life anew. Accordingly it was agreed that she should go to Virginia to live with relations, and the brother mentioned in the Montgomery Advertiser's article, was chosen to accompany her. This programme was known to and indorsed by the friends and acquaintances of the family.

When the brother and sister reached Atlanta, Miss Ara changed her mind and said she would not go to Virginia among her relatives. She preferred going where she was not known and enter upon a new field altogether. This step did not at first meet the views of her brother, but having the utmost confidence in his sister's ability to look out for herself, gave his consent, and they went to Selma, Ala. She did not seem to like Selma, and from there they went to Montgomery. Here she adopted the name of "Mrs. Ara Smith," and secured employment in a dressmaking establishment. It was her intention to learn this trade and go west, where she could earn her own living in a land where she was entirely unknown. Her brother gave her a sum of money and returned home, saying nothing to the family of her true whereabouts, but leading them to suppose that she had carried out her original intention of going to Virginia.

She toiled on uncomplainingly until last Sunday, when she died. The particulars of her death were given in Sunday's issue of this paper. The family knew nothing of her illness until after she was buried, and they beg to return thanks to the good people who ministered to her death-bed.

A LECHEROUS JUDGE.

The Story of His Love Told by an Outraged Illinois Husband.

CHICAGO, August 18.—The sensation of the hour in social and legal circles is the exclusive publication in the Herald of the fact that Pleasant Henderson, a wealthy farmer of Knox county, Illinois, has commenced suit against his wife Josephine, in which Hon. Alfred W. Craig, justice of the supreme court of Illinois, and one of the most eminent jurists of the west, is corespondent. Papers filed in the case reveal a scandalous condition of affairs, the seventeen-year old son of the Hendersons making affidavit that he caught his mother in the act of adultery with Craig; that he procured a pistol with the intention of shooting the latter dead, but that his mother disarmed him while Craig skipped out. It is alleged that several law firms, whose names are given, declined to accept the husband's retainer, because Craig is so high in position and so powerful as to be able to ruin any practicing attorney who might incur his antagonism. It is now in the hands of F. S. Murphy, the leading lawyer of Galesburg. Henderson demanded an immediate trial, and says if there are any attempts at filibustering he will have resorts to the wild western methods as soon as Craig returns from Western Dakota, whither he has made a sudden and desperate trip. Mrs. Henderson has the reputation of being the most handsome and magnificently formed woman in Knox county.

AN AMERICANIZED CHINAMAN.

Declaring His Intention to Become a Citizen of the United States.

PHILADELPHIA, August 18.—Frank Wanne, an Americanized Chinaman, formally declared his intention in the office of the prothonotary of the common pleas courts to-day of becoming a citizen of the United States. He was neatly dressed in the prevailing mode. His coat was a fashionable Prince Albert, and in the folds of his fine silk necktie a large diamond sparkled. He wore a high silk hat and carried a slender cane. His cue had been cut off and his hair was permitted to grow all over his head. It was combed in a style approaching the bang. He retained one queer notion suggestive of the superstitions of the Celestial land. He wore for good luck a bright penny stuck in the open space of his right ear. He gave his age as 27, and said that he had been in this country for 11 years, during the greater part of which time he had lived in the west and made an excellent income by acting as interpreter in the courts and in the transactions of business affairs. He now controls a laundry under the name of Clung Lee, on Ridge avenue. He also acts as interpreter here when required, and turns many an honest dollar by procuring the services of lawyers for those of his countrymen who may require legal aid. He receives a commission both from the attorney and the client. He is said to be moderately rich and to own considerable real estate. He is not married and swore on the Bible. He speaks English fluently and with hardly a trace of foreign accent. He reads easily and signed his name to the papers in an excellent round hand, ending with a long flourish.

LAST NIGHT'S FIRE.

The Southern Sun Bonnet Company Suffer a Material Loss.

Atlanta came near having another serious conflagration this morning. A few minutes after one o'clock an alarm was turned in simultaneously from boxes 14 and 41. The alarm was caused by the detection of a light blaze issuing from the windows of the second story of Dr. Thurmond's brick building on Pryor street near Line street. The blaze was accompanied by a large body of stiffling smoke and the discovery was a timely one, for within a few seconds the entire building would have been wrapt in flames. The alarm, coming as it did from two boxes, which are located in different portions of the city, led to some confusion when the fire brigade sought the scene of the conflagration.

The fire, when the department began combatting it had gained considerable headway. It was burning in a secret channel and quite an amount of labor was exhausted before the brigade could locate it. Then they fought from the front and rear of the building and completely deluged the place in water, before the fire was entirely extinguished. The building was occupied by the Southern Sun bonnet manufacturing company, Selig & Bro., proprietors, and was well stocked with bonnets and unmade goods. The value of the stock or the amount of the company's loss could not be ascertained, as neither of the proprietors came out. The fire is supposed to have had its origin in matches and mice. The building was only slightly damaged by fire. Mr. Arnold, of the late Kimball, first discovered the fire. He was awakened by the smell of the burning rags.

To Keep the Peace!

LYNCHBURG, Va., August 18—J. N. Patton and E. E. Hartsook, sub-proofssor in the Virginia military institute, were arrested here to-day on suspicion of being about to engage in a duel. They were bound over to keep the peace.

BUSINESS AND MONEY.

The committee of merchants have secured about twenty-five thousand dollars subscriptions to the new line of steamers between Augusta and Savannah. The total amount required is $60,000. It is proposed to raise part of this in New York. The line will consist of four steamers giving one for each point daily. An effort is being made to organize an insurance company with a capital of fifty thousand dollars, twenty-five thousand already subscribed. Money is very tight here, but the cotton crop will soon begin to come in and an easier money market is expected.

THE GROWTH OF A YEAR.

Special to The Constitution.

VILLA RICA, August 18 —One year ago today the lots on which this town stands were sold and we write to let the readers of THE CONSTITUTION know how we have progressed, and what improvements have been made in twelve months. On the day of sale this town was field and forest, part of it planted in cotton and corn, the other in forest trees. To-day we have in the neighborhood of seventy-five houses; twenty store houses; wooden ones, but well built, finished, painted, etc., forty dwellings that would do credit to any village. A handsome, eighteen-room hotel, complete in all its appointments, table included, which is becoming to be the admiration of the traveling public; a livery stable, well kept and well patronized; a planing mill, brickyard, blacksmith and wood shops, etc.; thirteen general stores, two drug stores, two hardware, two millinery stores, two shoe shops. Other houses are in course of erection. Our population numbers three hundred and twenty-five. Two hundred and fifty whites and seventy-five blacks. The health of the new town has been good this year, with the exception of sickness among children, five of whom have died. We have good water, easily obtained. Plenty of room for more houses and people, with every reason and prospect for a lively town in the near future. The lands adjoining are good for farming, fruit and stock raising, with untold mineral wealth lying beneath the surface awaiting the touch of enterprise and capital to develop its richness. The citizens of Villa Rica and vicinity have indeed a bright future.

Mr. Julius Vonderlieth was brought home from Towns county to day; he is but a mere shadow of his former self, and his life hangs by a thread.

Mrs. J. M. Barry is quite ill with fever.

The meeting of the Choral union was well attended last evening. Mozart's Gloria in Excelsis was rehearsed. This organization proposes to give several fine concerts.

Uncle Johnny Wimberly has at last consented to the sale of his little stand near the book store.

Cotton Picking.

From the Americus Recorder.

The price for cotton pickers is not such a big question this season as it has been. Heretofore the scramble for cotton pickers, irrespective of the value of the work or the price of cotton, has been remarkable. Many farmers have been giving, year after year, 50 cents per hundred for the single item of picking, including trash, dirt, etc., whether the staple was worth in market seven or nine cents, thus giving about one-fifth of the crop for the mere gathering. A thing of this sort cannot last. To pay fifty cents per hundred for picking cotton and have to sell it for eight cents per pound, is something which cannot be honestly done, and the farmer who does it either swindles himself or he must swindle his labor to keep even. There is an ample supply of labor here, the present crop will be picked out at thirty and forty cents per hundred. It will pay better to let the cotton lie in the field for manure than have it gathered at fifty cents per hundred. Such a price cannot be paid.

The Story of an Ox.

From the Warrenton Clipper.

In conclusion, old Buck, a true and faithful ox of Mr. L. M. Fowler's, it seems, went off on a visit about two years ago without Mr. Fowler's permission. Mr. Fowler found his good old Buck not long since hitched to a wagon here at Norwood. He was drove there by a Mr. Ivey from away up in the Redlick regions of Warren County. Old Buck was traced back through a half dozen different parties, and it was found out that a Mr. Boxdale was the first to have him in possession. Mr. Boxdale we learn kept him about five months and finding no owner for Buck sold him immediately. The case was left to arbitration and was decided for Mr. Fowler to recover that good old Buck and twenty dollars damages.

Mad Dog Killed.

From the Sumter Republican.

Sunday morning Dr. Thomas E. Smith, found his favorite dog suffering, as he thought, from poison or a snake bite. Soon after the discovery he was called off, and in a little while his wife went to see her mother, leaving Miss Nellie Bass, a young white girl alone. At noon she gave the dog something to eat, and he tried to bite her. Noticing that his eyes were green and that he was frothing at the mouth and snapping at everything in reach, she took a double barrel shot gun and gave him two doses. This did not kill him and she procured a revolver and put six balls into his body and his spirit quietly left for the happy dog country across the Styx.

West Armuchee, Walker county, has had a killing. Sunday a negro named John Evans stabbed another, a new comer named Brown, who was living on the Pierce Little place. Brown, who was cut in the left side above the hip, died. As yet Evans is at large.

The West Point Enterprise says that subscriptions to the amount of nine hundred dollars, have already been gotton up to build a new church at Providence, in the Wolfe and James settlement. Uncles Jake Wolfe and Lee James both gave $200 and it will be built soon.

Oglethorpe Echo: The cursing and swearing and vulgarity that is heard upon the streets of Lexington grows more and more onerous, and some of our best citizens will make an attempt to have it stopped. There is no objection raised to the crowd coming to town, but the cursing and vulgarity is unnecessary and can be dispensed with.

Fairburn News Letter: Mr. Alec. Stephens's little girl baby was accidentally knocked on the head by a well windlass last Friday, and was seriously hurt. The accident was caused by an older sister knocking the bucket in the well. The child's head was gashed over the left eye. Dr. Mobley sewed up and dressed the wound, and the baby is doing well.

Waynesboro Herald: The colored inmates of the jail raised quite a commotion one night last week. The town was aroused by earnest shouts that the jail was about to be burned. It seems that a white man who was confined there for a violation of town ordinances, amused himself by threatening to set fire to the concern, greatly to the discomfort of his fellow prisoners.

Jackson Herald: Mr. Henry Hawks, P. O. Harmony Grove, Ga., wants a wife 16 or 17 years old, weighing 111 pounds, light complexion, blue eyes and light hair. Any one finding such a one can report to him and pay for this advertisement, and they will be handsomely rewarded. Mr. Hawks is a widower, 54 years of age, with no incumbrances. Please preserve this, as it will appear again.

Greenville Herald: On last Monday night, Mr. A. G. Caldwell, a prominent citizen of our county, came near losing his life under the following circumstances: Mr. Caldwell and his son, Hardy, who were sleeping in different apartments, each heard a noise about the yard and supposing some one was attempting robbery, got up to investigate it. Mr. Caldwell went out quietly into the yard and Hardy, not knowing that his father was up, mistook him for the would be burglar and shot him. Fortunately the gun was charged with bird shot, or the result would have been fatal; as it is, Mr. Caldwell is suffering considerably from his wounds.

Eastman Times: John Thompson, a carpenter of our town, swore out a warrant on Monday last against Sam Parker and Amelia Wayne, charging them with robbery, the particulars of which are about as follows: On Saturday, Thompson went into Sam's barber shop and got a shave. He then lay down just outside of the shop. He claims to have had between $28 and $30 on his person when he entered the shop, and on awaking he found that his money was gone. Amelia Wayne also occupies rooms in the building, and Thompson thinks that Sam and Amelia robbed him while asleep.

Perry Journal: Mr. J. D. Baskin, who is farming on the Killen place, about three miles east of Perry, brought a stalk of cotton to this office last Tuesday, that was about 3 1-2 feet high and contained 105 forms, blooms and bolls. This cotton was planted late in May but did not come up until the 4th of June. It remained fresh and green throughout the drouth in July, and is now growing and taking on fruit vigorously. It was planted in checks four feet apart each way, well manured, with three stalks in a hill. There is about nine acres of it, and Mr. Baskin expects to gather at least nine bales of cotton.

The Hamilton Journal says that the falling off in value of the taxable property of Harris county is more apparent than real. The county is decidedly in a better condition than it was last year, lands are held at nigher prices and town property of every kind is held at higher prices. The grand jury must revise the tax books. Mr. Gordon, the tax receiver has done his duty and is not to blame for the falling off. The individual tax payers have not returned property of which they are possessed and have greatly undervalued that returned. The only remedy, it seems to us, lies in having assessors appointed in each militia district who shall examine all property in their districts and assess its value.

Walker County Messenger: There was a cutting scrape last Sunday near the Blue Spring, about 8 p. m. Ellick Knox was at the house of John Nash and his brothers. There had been an old grude between Ellick and the Nashes. Nash's horse had been driven hard in a wagon in which Ellick rode. The matter having been brought up, Ellick said he had nothing to do with the driving. One word led to another until they made an attack on him. He defended himself with his knife, cutting John Nash in three places. One dangerous blow split the chin, and grazed the neck. One was across the left breast. Another ranged from the left shoulder to the elbow. Ellick, who by the way is one of the best hands in the neighborhood, has sought other pastures.

Asylum Notes.

From the Sparta Ishmaelite.

The Georgia lunatic asylum contains over eleven hundred inmates, and additions to this number are being made almost daily. This is perhaps the largest, best conducted and neatest kept asylum in the south. Dr. T. O. Powell and his competent corps of assistants deserve the highest commendations for the faithful and complete performance of their various duties in this home for the insane. Georgians can truly be proud of their lunatic asylum and its management.

The building for the accommodation of the colored insane is a new, handsome structure, containing five hundred rooms, its ground circumference being one-half mile. This is now occupied by over two hundred inmates.

A building is now going up in front and to the left of the "center building," which will, when completed, be known as convalescent hall, in which, we were informed, will be a large concert or amusement hall.

Chief among the curiosities of the institution is Joe Busby, of the male idiot department. Joe is a dwarf, only three feet high, weighs only fifty pounds and is 45 years old.

The buildings and grounds are abundantly supplied with water, water plugs and a stationary fire engine of tremendous capacity, so that a fire to do any damage at all seems almost an impossibility in any part of the institution.

THE LEGISLATURE.

No Session of the Senate Yesterday—The House Proceedings.

There was no session in the senate.

THE HOUSE.

The house met at 9 o'clock and was called to order by Speaker Garrard. Prayer by Rev. N. Keff Smith. The roll was called and the journal was read.

Mr. Jenkins, of Putnam, moved to change the journal so as to make the previous question which was called yesterday on the redistricting bill to apply no further than the motion by Mr. Reese, of Wilkes, to recommit. After some remarks by Mr. Jenkins in favor of his motion it was agreed to by the house. This reopens the redistricting bill for debate when it comes up.

On motion of Mr. Harris, of Bibb, it was made the special order for next Thursday.

Mr. Hulsey, of Fulton, offered a resolution requesting the governor to make such a settlement with the sureties on the bond of Samuel R. Hoyle, late tax collector of Fulton county, as he may deem best to the interest of the state. Referred to finance committee.

The regular order was the call of counties for new matter.

Mr. Waldroop of Union—To regulate the grazing of cattle in districts infected with disease.

Mr. Eason of Telfair—A bill for the relief of the heirs of Mordecai Shaftall.

Mr. Hawkes of Sumter—A bill to amend section 3971 of the code, relative to foreclosure of mortgages.

Mr. Gordon of Houston—A bill to incorporate Fort Valley and to repeal all former acts of incorporation.

Mr. McBride of Houston—To furnish Haralson county supreme court reports.

Mr. Hulsey of Fulton—A bill to authorize the governor to sell or exchange certain lands in Cobb county owned by the state, with the consent of the lessees of the State road.

Mr. Hoge of Fulton—A bill to provide for transcript of justice court judgments.

Mr. Hulsey of Fulton—A bill to incorporate the Atlantic, Gulf and Northwestern railroad company.

Also, a bill to amend the act creating a board of commissioners of roads and revenues for Fulton county.

Also, a bill to incorporate the Mechanics' Savings bank of Atlanta.

Mr. Brooks of Floyd—To submit the question of prohibition in Floyd county.

Also, a bill to amend the road laws so far as they relate to Floyd county.

Mr. James of Douglas—To amend the law as to granting corporate powers.

Also, a bill to change the time of Douglas superior court to third Mondays in January and July, so as to give two weeks court in Douglass if necessary.

Mr. Bishop of Dawson—A bill to prescribe fees of justices and constables in proceedings against intruders or tenants holding over.

Mr. Sweat of Clinch—To amend the act requiring a record of wild lands to be kept in each county.

Mr. Russell of Clarke—To submit the question of establishing free schools to the voters of Athens.

Also, a bill to incorporate the Athens, Danelsville and Eastern railroad.

Mr. Teasley of Cherokee—To incorporate the town Ball Ground in Cherokee county.

Mr. McDonough of Chatham—To provide method of obtaining charter for shell or plank road company.

Mr. Falligant of Chatham—A bill to authorize the issue of bonds to the amount of $100,000 to build a courthouse.

Also, a bill to authorize the levy of taxes for schools and jail purposes in Chatham county.

Mr. Carroll of Carroll—A bill to make it misdemeanor to bathe in streams or ponds in view of the public road.

Mr. Peek, of Rockdale, chairman of the committee on agricultural submitted a report.

Mr. Fite of Bartow—A bill to furnish supreme court reports to Bartow county.

Mr. Sutton of Meriwether—A resolution to procure a portrait of Chief Justice Hiram Warner.

Mr. Wolfe of Laurens—A bill to incorporate the Alice and Dublin railroad.

On motion of Mr. Reese, of Wilkes, the house took up local and special bills on third reading.

The consolidated bill to prevent the running at large of stock in Hancock, Clarke, Jasper, Taliaferro and Cobb counties, was taken up. The bill was passed after striking Cobb and Jasper counties.

A bill to amend the charter of Trion, Chattooga county. Passed.

Mr. Carter of Appling—A bill to fix the liquor license in Appling county at $1,000. Passed.

A bill to amend the acts incorporating the town of Lawrenceville.

A bill to amend the acts incorporating Marietta.

A bill to prohibit sale of liquor in Coweta county.

Mr. Carter of Appling—To prevent hunting on certain land lots in Appling county. Passed.

Mr. Davis of Habersham—A bill to authorize the issue of bonds to the amount of $6,000 by the city of Toccoa. Passed.

Mr. McBurry—A bill to provide for an election in Hartwell on the liquor question. Passed.

Also, a bill to incorporate the town of Bowersville in Hart county. Passed.

Mr. McBride of Haralson—To incorporate the town of Bremen in Haralson county. Passed.

Mr. Key of Jasper—A bill to prohibit the sale of liquor in Monticello without consent of three fourths of the freeholders of said town.

The house adjourned to nine o'clock Monday.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

The house rushed through local and special bills yesterday.

No more new matter in either house except by unanimous consent.

Yesterday Mr. Jenkins, of Putnam, received a letter from a prominent citizen of Eatonton in which he said: "Our people thank you and Mr. Humber for your vote on the capitol bill."

The members of the house were studying the three maps of Georgia on the walls of their hall very assiduously yesterday. Each map is marked off according to a different plan for redistricting.

COVINGTON, Ga., August 17, 1883—Editors CONSTITUTION: An unsigned communication from this place to your paper, some two weeks ago or more, having made an erroneous impression as to the true condition of Colonel W. W. Clark, it will interest the large circle of his friends and acquaintances abroad to know that the cloud which overspread his bright and strong mind, for a short time before his death, was produced by physical disease, difficult of satisfactory diagnosis, and was not insanity. I was his attending physician, and while medical opinion differed somewhat in diagnosis, it was agreed that the brief mental obscuration, which preceded his death, was the shadow of a fatal bodily sickness. Dr. Stokes, the physician in chief at Mount Hope Retreat, to which Colonel Clark was taken, and at which he died, writes concerning the case as follows: "He certainly was not insane. He labored under no form of insanity. He died with well-marked symptoms of blood poisoning. The stupor and comatose condition, exactly as he presented them, were precisely such as we constantly observe in the closing scene of Bright's disease. There was, no doubt, kidney disease. * * * The disease was incurable from the first."

Yours, respectfully,
A. C. PERRY, M. D.

A Relic of the Past.

From the Waynesboro Citizen.

In our rumbles we have picked up an old blank note, which is supposed to have been printed more than a hundred years ago, and which is unique in every particular. The printing is done on old fashioned pica italic, on paper of the manufacture of that day, thick, rough and coarse, with an impression that almost came through the paper, perfectly devoid of ornament. The wording occupies but two lines across the narrow paper, and is as follows, in form and style as near as we can reproduce it:

TWO DAYS after date, we, or or either of us, or I myself, promise to pay ISAIAH CARTER, or Bearer, for value received.

Dollars. Cents.

This form is too simple to meet the demands of business men of the present day, and no doubt Mr. Carter would be astonished if he could come back and see a merchant's mortgage note of the present times. Mr. Isaiah Carter was the grandfather of our fellow townsman, Mr. E. A. Carter, and who with his brother Alexander Carter were the first settlers of Waynesboro. Mr. Isaiah Carter built and lived where Mr. S. A. Gray's residence now stands and Mr. Alexander Carter built the house now owned and occupied by Colonel John D. Munnerlyn. General Washington is said to have been the guest of Mr. Alexander Carter for a night while on his southern tour and then en route for Washington city. The lumber to build these houses was sawn by hand with a whipsaw, and was of the best timber. There were no saw mills here in those days, whose devouring teeth have since destroyed nearly all the timber in the country. There were no railroads, and the few goods disposed of by the Carters, who were the first business men of Waynesboro, must be wagoned from Augusta, or probably from some landing on the Savannah river. What a change time has wrought, and with what astonishment would these old men look upon the town whose foundation they laid, could they come back.

Dooly Curiosities.

From the Dooly Vindicator.

Dooly is noted for its curiosities. Sometime ago something was said about a dwarf in this district who is twenty-eight years old, four feet high, weighs only fifty-five pounds. We also have a giant in point of stature. He stands six feet and seven inches in his socks. Two other districts to hear from.

COL. G. W. ADAIR SAYS:

ATLANTA, GA., AUG., 14, '83.

MR. R. T. SMILLIE, AGENT HERRING & CO.

DEAR SIR:

The large Safe I bought from you in 1881, made by Herring & Co., of New York City, was in the great Kimball House fire of the 12th inst., and remained in the ruins from the morning of the 12th to the night of the 13th. When it was taken out and opened the contents were found to be in a splendid state of preservation. Money, books, deeds, papers, etc., were found all right. The Safe has given entire satisfaction, and is all you recommended it to be, and I take pleasure in adding my testimonial to numerous others as to the quality of the Safe you represent. Very truly yours,

G. W. ADAIR.

Also, what J. W. CULPEPPER, Esq, Secretary and Treasurer of the Atlanta City Waterworks, says:

ATLANTA, GA., AUG., 14, '83.

MR. R. T. SMILLIE, AGENT HERRING & CO.

DEAR SIR:

The Safe bought of Herring & Co., for the Atlanta Water works in 1874 was in the great Kimball House fire of the 12th inst., and remained in the ruins until the 14th at 2 o'clock p. m., and when taken out was at a red heat, remaining in a bed of red hot coals for over fifty hours. I had a water hose play on it for six hours before I could attempt to open it, and when I did so, I found all the records, papers, money, vouchers, etc., in a perfect state of preservation, and I take pleasure in recommending Herring & Co.'s Safe to be what it is represented---a Fire Proof Safe. Yours truly,

J. W. CULPEPPER,
Secretary and Treasurer of Atlanta City Water Works.

A CORRESPONDENT, representing the Knights of Labor, takes issue with certain editorial statements made by THE CONSTITUTION. MR. KIMBALL AND THE KIMBALL HOUSE.

The return of Mr. H. I. Kimball to Atlanta for the purpose of organizing a company to rebuild the Kimball house, is an event of significance and importance.

We extend to Mr. Kimball a hearty welcome and wish him god speed in his undertaking. Our position in the matter is this: The Kimball house must be rebuilt at any cost and in any despite. As to who builds it, or where it is built, or how, are details with which we shall not concern ourselves. It is a great work and a needed one. Whoever makes an attempt to put it through should have the hearty support of every good citizen of Atlanta, regardless of any prejudice or favor. He shall certainly have that of THE CONSTITUTION.

There are many reasons why we are glad to see Mr. Kimball take hold of this work. He is a man of boundless energy and is simply tireless in whatever he undertakes. He has the time and the disposition to canvass the matter thoroughly, and he appreciates the importance of prompt action. And when the hotel is built it will be a structure worthy of Atlanta—and of Georgia. Mr. Kimball has perfect taste, a genius for designing and building, and fine executive ability. With a company organized, with Mr. Kimball in charge and a good board of advisory directors, we shall have a hotel, the beauty and elegance of which will make us grateful that the Kimball house was removed to make way for it.

These suggestions are offered in a spirit of justice and fairness to Mr. Kimball. Beyond this there is a sentiment that will incline the public reasonably to the man who built the house originally, and whose name it bore, when he comes to lift it from its ashes. He will find that he will have a fair trial and the hearty good wishes of our people. THE CONSTITUTION will do all that lies in its power to hold up his hands in the great work he has undertaken, just as it would hold up the hands of any other man who should undertake it. The hotel must be built, and it is of little matter who builds it. Mr. Kimball thinks he can do it, and he is at work in that direction. Let him have a fair and full trial. He is entitled to that much, and he does not ask for more than that.

WHY WE SHOULD STUDY TAXATION.

If the facts as we have stated them be but half true we should seriously set to work upon a remedy. Not only are they half true, whole true, but the half has not been told. As Washington is the city of magnificent distances, so the government at Washington is one of magnificent prodigality. The people may economize and struggle, but the government is perfectly free and easy in the use of money. It raises $400,000,000 for itself, while all the state governments combined (in 1880) raised about $52,000,000. So rich is it, indeed, that even now a gigantic plan is on foot for the general government to take the state governments immediately under its wing, and pay the way of them all.

Do not smile, however. Even that would be a much less "incident" than "incidental protection" already is. For incidental protection we already pay more than for government; the estimate is $556,000,000, i. e., more than ten times the cost of all the state and territorial governments combined: the cost of the latter, being $52,000,000—ten times that cost would be but $520,000,000, leaving about $36,000,000 to spare. Another huge item is to be regarded—the waste by the diversion of labor into wrong channels; this, too, is immense—almost beyond computation. Does it not behoove us to understand this subject thoroughly—to become intimately versed with all its principles and all its operations? What we in Georgia would be able, by hard work and close saving, to lay up for ourselves and our children, much of it goes this way. The savings, after paying these enormous taxes, and yet more enormous incidentals, are less than the share government takes from us—far less than the share of the "protected industries"—government pets! This is seriously true. The average savings of Georgia from the hard earnings of her people for the ten years between 1870 and 1880 were less than $6,000,000 per annum. The average federal tax on a million and a half of people was $12,000,000, i. e., twice the amount of her savings. The average paid toward protection would be $16,500,000—over two and a half times her savings. If Georgia paid but half the average, even then the burdens of taxation, direct and incidental, would be as follows:

Average tax	$ 2,000,000
Protection	16,500,000
	$28,500,000
Half this	14,250,000

This would be nearly 2½ times the average savings of the people spent with lordly prodigality and profusion by their servant, the government, for itself and its favorites. Probably her actual share was about $20,000,000. This is over 7 per cent of the returned value of all the property of the state for the year 1882. It is higher by far than the highest city taxes!

In our state government we pinch and skin down to the very bone. We pay poor salaries to our judges, and to our officers generally. We work our supreme court judges to death. Our whole people are hard worked, to pay unnecessary taxes for government and its proteges, ourselves not among the number. The very interest we take in state taxation convicts us of folly in neglecting our greater interest in federal.

We are penny wise and pound foolish to pay such close attention to the state penny, and neglect the federal pound. We are careful of dimes—negligent of dollars. Endless advantage and enlargement would be found in our state and county affairs could we save half the excess of federal taxation, and apply half of this half to state purposes.

The moral results, in corruption, premiums on fraud—vice in high places—are worse than the economical. But these are bad enough. We do no day's work, no week's work so important. No month's labor in the year will count as that which reduces the tax to its just level, which transfers these millions and hundreds of millions from government and parasites into savings and the just reward of industry.

A possible saving of a billion of dollars per annum in the public wealth is probably not an overestimate, by a just system of federal taxation. The possible saving to Georgia would probably be not far from $20,000,000. Suppose it $10,000,000 or $5,000,000, it were very useful to us. Even that would be several times our state tax saved.

A GOVERNMENT POSTAL TELEGRAPH.

At a time when it was thought that the strike of the telegraph operators would create considerable delay and confusion in the ordinary business of the country, some one of our esteemed exchanges suggested that it might possibly be prudent after awhile—that is to say, in the course of human events—for the government to erect a postal telegraph for the benefit of the public. The suggestion was very timidly presented, as we remember, but not too timidly, for the ink had scarcely been washed from the types before it was pounced upon by numerous other esteemed exchanges. Editor Dana, of the Sun, rose and remarked, no more government jobs, no more movements in the direction of centralization, if the country please; and Editor Joseph Pulitzer, of the New York World, also protested in terms equally as emphatic.

No doubt these voluminous protests frightened the esteemed exchange which had the audacity to make the suggestion, for we have heard nothing more on the subject except an occasional renewal of the protests. There is no doubt that centralization is a fearful thing to contemplate, but it is questionable whether the operation of a postal telegraph by the general government is in the direction of centralization. It is very certain, for instance, that neither the power nor the strength of the government would be increased by it. Such a system would operate to increase the efficiency of the post-office department, and, in that direction, would fill a long-felt want.

In arguing against a government postal telegraph, Mr. Dana points to the jobbing and corruption in the bureau of printing and other bureaus in Washington. These are facts, to be sure, but they are not arguments against a postal telegraph. There is a good deal of jobbery in the treasury and navy departments. Does it follow that these departments ought to be abolished? Not at all. This is a government of the people, by the people, for the people. If the people are dissatisfied with the corruptions at Washington, there is a cheaper and surer remedy than abolishing the departments.

The Sun says the government might as well be expected to engage in the express business as to establish a postal telegraph. The illustration is not an apt one. If the postal service of the country were as perfect as private enterprise has made the express companies, the government would do a large and growing share of express business through the mails. Even as matters stand, hundreds and thousands of valuable packages are carried through the mails, for, while the service is not perfect, it is reasonably sure. Not a day passes that the government does not compete with the express companies.

The truth is, a government postal telegraph would not only increase the efficiency of the postal service, but would effectually dispose of one of the most dangerous monopolies the country has ever seen. But if there are any real arguments against a government postal telegraph, we should like to see them. If it is really a movement in the directton of centralization, we should like to have it explained.

THE New Orleans Picayune says that in Philadelphia the young man who poses behind a soda-fountain this season becomes a practicing physcian the next. This is a gross exaggeration. Why should a young man practice behind a soda fountain when he can buy a diploma from a Philadelphia medical college for seventy-five cents and thus become an honored member of the Philadelphia society.

THUS far no witness has been produced to prove that Dorsey's statements about the republican party are true. A party with so many Christian statesmen who would rather perjure themselves than not ought certainly to be able to produce a cloud of witnesses going to show that Dorsey spent no money in Indiana and that the leading republicans did not, as was stated, give him a banquet.

MR. EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN, the poet, critic and essayist, lost $200,000 in the recent Wall street flurry. Why? Simply because Mr. Stedman is the author of a son as well as a number of sonnets. The son got into speculation, when a sonnet would have got only into circulation. Mr. Stedman has warm friends and admirers in all parts of the country who will sympathize with him deeply.

SEVERAL of our esteemed northern exchanges have joined the Washington Republican in stating that THE CONSTITUTION has begged them to bury the animosities of the war. There is a mistake somewhere. THE CONSTITUTION thinks and cares no more about the animosities of the war than it does about the suzerainty of China in Tonquin.

THE republicans of Ohio are growing desperate. They have nominated an ex-governor and ex-congressman as a candidate for auditor of Hamilton county. There is an old proverb to the effect that a man ceases to be a statesman the moment he becomes a candidate for coroner or county auditor.

WESTERN editors are still making a desperate effort to use the word "strategic." There is an unwritten law among compositors that it should be "strategetic," and the compositors are right; at any rate, we sympathize with them.

EDITOR HASKELL, of the Boston Herald, and the other independents, maintain that there can be no genuine reform unless it is carried out by the republican corruptionists.

IT is reliably hinted by a Pennsylvania journal that "the republicans are bound to carry Kentucky at no distant day." As no day can be said to be distant the Pennsylvania editor is probably correct.

HONEST JOHN SHERMAN is not certain that the Charles Foster Foraker-Jayhawker faction will have a walkover in Ohio this season. Honest John is a very shrewd estimator.

THE poet of the Courier-Journal, whose imitation meerschaum can be heard to fry when he smokes, says that "an old pipe passing along in the morning is a perfect rouser."

BROTHER BEECHER describes himself as "a cordial Christian evolutionist." We advise Brooklyn to accept this statement of the case and make the most of it.

JUDGE HOADLY says he is willing to meet Foraker in joint debate. Foraker has not been heard from. He is awaiting orders from Charles Foster, of Ohio.

THE Western Union ought to buy Mackay out now before he grows too costly. The attention of Mr. Gould should be called to this matter.

MR. BISMARCK should import some of our diseased American lard for the purpose of poisoning the liberals.

THE wages of a married man cannot be garnisheed in Missouri. Georgia is a long ways behind.

POLITICAL NOTES.

THE elections in Spain are fixed for to-day.

GREENBACKISM in Missouri is trying to revive itself.

EX-SENATOR BRUCE has engaged to deliver twenty-five republican speeches in Ohio next month.

THE recent imperial meeting is considered a guarantee of friendship between Germany and Austria.

MICHIGAN prohibitionists propose, with a $100,000 campaign fund, to make it lively for liquor this fall.

IN politics a candidate may do much good fielding and catch the other side out without making much of a run himself.

GOVERNOR GLICK, of Kansas, wants the democracy of that state to get strong enough to elect him to the United States Senate.

AT a meeting of the democratic state committee of Massachusetts it was decided to hold the state convention at Springfield on September 26th.

THE Pennsylvania senate passed a resolution of sympathy yesterday for Jeremiah S. Black, ex-attorney general of the United States, who is now lying very ill at his home in York, Pa.

ROSECRANS, of California, is credited with a disposition to do all he can to promote Butler's candidacy for president. He says Butler will be assisted by the democratic congressional convention.

THE democratic district convention at Jackson, Miss., after four days session and the withdrawal of four prominent candidates, yesterday nominated R. E. Miller, of Copiah county, for district attorney.

GENERAL MEIGS, who is in charge of the work on the new pension office building, was presented with two costly lawn vases by a firm who have the contract for furnishing the terra-cotta used in the building. He shipped them back at the expense of the sender, after giving vigorous expressions to his views on the subject of bribery.

GOVERNOR MURRAY, of Utah, suggests as a means of exterminating Mormonism, the abolition of the plan of governing Utah by an elective legislature and the substitution of a legislative council, to be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate. There is nothing in the constitution that prohibits this form of government for a territory.

FOREMOST among the German press, the Berliner Tagblatt agitates the growing advisability of measures to be taken to stop the outflow of emigration by offering inducements to the people to stay at home, and to all that do, increased chances of earning a better living and of acquiring a permanent home stead to attach them and their successors to the soil. The same paper does not believe in the vaunted benefits of foreign colonies, but rather favors remunerative settlements at home in the shape of farms, to which end it advocates the abolition of the large landed estates as an absolute necessity.

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE.

OSCAR WILDE'S plaster portraits show him in the pale caste of thought.

THE prince of Wales has contributed £100 to the Ischia earthquake fund.

CAPTAIN WEBB'S admirers in Boston have subscribed $800 for Mrs. Webb.

LORD AYLESFORD is at Chicago seeing the world. Reputable clubs snub him.

GENERAL LONGSTREET will address some of his old soldiers at Jackson, Miss., on September 13th.

MR. D. L. MOODY, the evangelist, will begin a series of revival meeting in Baltimore on September 15th.

BISHOP BECKWITH, of Georgia, has doffed clerical robes for a month's shooting and fishing in the northwest.

MISS DAWES, daughter of Senator Dawes, has retired from her editorial connection with the Pittsfield (Mass.,) Journal.

MME. ALBINI has in her drawing room in the Boltons, South Kensington, a portrait of President Arthur with a personal and complimentary dedication.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S two well known private secretaries, John G. Nicolay and Colonel John Hay, are about starting together for a summer trip in Colorado.

M. VICTOR HUGO has run foul of the majesty of the law. His name is posted among the delinquent taxpayers of Jersey for non-payment of taxes on two dogs.

MR. TALMAGE, the preacher, will return to his Brooklyn pulpit on the first Sunday of September. In his travels through Kentucky he is being greeted by very large audiences, people flocking curiously to see him.

THE King of Cambodia has created J. A. Halderman, the American consul-general in Siam, a commander of the Royal Order of Cambodia. This is the second decoration tendered to Mr. Halderman during his three years' residence in the east.

CHARLES PIERRE CHOUTEAU, of St. Louis, has given $10,000 toward the erection of a monument at Springfield in memory of Pierre Menard, the first lieutenant-governor of Illinois. Mr. Chouteau says of Menard: "Never was there a man more beloved and esteemed," and indorsing the sentiment, E. B. Washburne adds that his political life "was without a blemish."

ABOUT three months ago the Rev. G. W. Manley, a young clergyman in charge of a Baptist church at Aiken, S. C., resigned his charge and went to Germany for the purpose of completing his education at the University of Leipsic. Last week his friends in Aiken received a letter from him stating that he was under the surveillance of the German police as a suspected dynamite conspirator, and requesting that such papers be forwarded to him as would relieve him from his embarrassing situation and protect him from further annoyance.

SOUTHERN INTELLIGENCE.

FROM present indications it is probable that Galveston, Texas, will receive for the season 1882-83 about 930,000 bales of cotton, leaving every port except New Orleans in the race.

ONE day's fruit sales in Key West, Florida, recently, footed up 12,500 mangoes, 74 bunches of bananas, 150 bunches plantains, 125 watermelons, besides other fruits in proportion.

MEMPHIS, Tennessee, is working out the water problem. Several southern cities which now have waterworks, entered into poor contracts (for the cities) and have short supplies of inferior water.

COTTON reports from Green, Perry, Marengo, Wilcox, Dallas, Lowndes, Autauga, Bullock and Montgomery counties, Alabama, are unfavorable. These are the chief cotton counties and make a bad showing for the state.

WESTERN North Carolina is certainly a great section for fruit. In Watauga county is an apple tree fifty years old which has on it about fifty bushels of fine apples, and has nine large branches, which give rise to thirty-two branchlets, is seven and a half feet in diameter and covers twenty-nine yards.

NEW ORLEANS Times-Democrat: "The attempt to start the outrage mill in Georgia is justly laughed at. The negro is as well treated there as in any northern state, and the flourishing condition of Georgia, her enterprise, enlightment and manufacturing greatness would silence any attempt at calling her bourbon."

Sports of the Nobility.

From the New York Times.

Certain puritanical and unreasonable people are greatly exercised over a recent affair in Newport "high life." Some of the nobility and aristocracy of the Newport cottages met at dinner in the Casino, and, as is the custom of the aristocracy of our American renaissance, drank more wine than was good for them, and amused themselves by throwing food and drink, crockery and glassware, out of the windows. Some of the by-passers weakly objected to this noble amusement, and ladies whose good clothes were spoiled by the showers from above have actually threatened to sue for damages. Persons who complain of high doings of this sort, and who murmur at the damage done by the hounds and horses of the nobility and gentry, and who criticise the profuse ostentation of the parvenus of Newport, forget that we are now living in a revival of the manners of Queen Anne's reign. Everybody who knows anything of the social history of the early part of the eighteenth century knows that the aristocracy and nobility of this favored land are faithfully reproducing the social traits of those times, intensified and heightened as they should be by a high American civilization.

The plutocracy which has chosen Newport as its favorite seat is undoubtedly familiar with the pictures of English social life drawn by Steele, Addison, Defoe, and other writers of Anne's reign. What more reasonable and natural than that an aristocracy that has builded for itself Queen Anne habitations, filled with Queen Anne furniture and garnished with Queen Anne bric-a-brack, should imitate the social customs so graphically described in the Rambler, the Tatler, the Spector, and "The Tale of a Tub?" It is to be expected that men and women who wear Queen Anne costumes and live in Queen cottages and villas should try to be so very Queen Anne that they should spend their nights in genteel debauchery, high play, and boisterous conviviality, and their days in yawning for some new and piquant diversion. In the days of the good Queen whose name is a household word in Newport, the belles and beaus of London would be seen carried home in sedan chairs, at early dawn, dressed as harlequins and columbines, nuns and harlots, kings and chimney sweeps, saints and sinners, returning from masquerade. Gallants and laced courtiers, feasting in the coffee houses, diverted themselves by pitching tankards and trenchers from the windows, emptying the contents of tureens and beakers upon the heads of the belated passengers, and sallying forth at times to break the heads of link-bearers and chairmen, by way of diversion.

Historians and satirists have well-nigh exhausted the resources of the English language in their endeavors to describe the wanton wastefulness and extravagance of the time. The frippery, display, and ostentation of the nobility and gentry of Queen Anne's day and faithfully reproduced by the newly rich of our own land. They who murmur at the mock fox hunting the cheap imitation of everything that is un-American, the coarse sensuality, and the veneering of American society, so conspicuous in Newport to-day, fail to take in the spirit of the time. History does repeat itself—in fashions and in manners as in the larger affairs of human life. The few people in New York and in Newport who stand aloof and gaze with species of pious horror at the gilded show that goes on should remember that now, as in the days of good Queen Anne, they who have neither family pride, delicacy, nor common sense to restrain them, and have money in plenty, must play out their little play, like butterflies in the sun. The stern sensors should not be over severe with the giddy creatures. They are the living illustrations of the gilded age.

The Way a Texas Statesman Sat.

From the Galveston News.

Ex-Governor Hubbard was perhaps the greatest curiosity on the ground at McKinney. The whole multitude wanted to see him and some capital stories of his personal characteristics were told. It is a whole circus to see Hubbard sit down. He will spread his feet about a foot and a half apart, then place a hand on either side of his very capacious "corporation," close his mouth firmly and sit slowly down. Once safely on the chair his face will assume a hundred heavenly expressions, and he will invarably pucker his mouth and give vent to an imaginable whistle. But if you want to see Hubbard at his best, you should see him endeavor to pick up a fallen umbrella. Such a thing was witnessed yesterday, and it created sport for the multitude for nearly ten minutes. At last the News man took compassion on him and helped him lift the fallen article. It is safe to say the Ex-Governor could not have reached it in six months.

Autumn Cheviots Mostly in Plaids.

From the New York Evening Post.

New autumn cheviots, tweeds, serges and basket clothes are mostly in plads, in even or irregular patterns and in quiet, neutral tones of fawn color, nun's grap, pale golden brown and the like, enlivened by stripes or dashes of scarlet and gold.

A Fancy Drink in California.

From the San Francisco Post.

A Reno saloonkeeper kept a bottle of pitch-pine splinters soaked in spirits of turpentine, for the use of customers who tell the barkeeper to hang it up; but the beverage became so popular in Reno that it was considered too good for that class of customers.

NIGHTS WITH UNCLE REMUS.*

VII.

African Jack.

Usually, the little boy, who regarded himself as Uncle Remus's partner, was not at all pleased when he found the old man entertaining, in his simple way, any of his colored friends; but he was secretly delighted when he called one night and found Daddy Jack sitteng by Uncle Remus's hearth. Daddy Jack was an object of curiosity to older people than the little boy. He was a genuine African, and for that reason he was known as African Jack, though the child had been taught to call him Daddy Jack. He was brought to Georgia in a slave ship when he was about twenty years old, and remained upon one of the sea islands for several years. Finally, he fell into the hands of the family of which Uncle Remus's little partner was the youngest representative, and became the trusted foreman of a plantation in the southern part of Georgia, known as the Walthall place. Once every year he was in the habit of visiting the Home Place in middle Georgia, and it was during one of these annual visits that the little boy found him in Uncle Remus's cabin.

Daddy Jack appeared to be quite a hundred years old, but he was probably not more than eighty. He was a little dried up old man, whose weazened, dwarfish appearance, while it was calculated to inspire awe in the minds of the superstitious, was not without its pathetic suggestions. The child had been told that the old African was a wizzard, a conjurer, and a snake charmer, but he was not afraid, for, in any event,—conjuration, witchcraft, or what not,—he was assured of the protection of Uncle Remus.

As the little boy entered the cabin, Uncle Remus smiled and nodded pleasantly, and made a place for him on a little stool upon which had been piled the odds and ends of work. Daddy Jack paid no attention to the child; his thoughts seemed to be elsewhere.

"Go en shake han's, honey, en tell Daddy Jack howdy. He laks good chilluns." Then to Daddy Jack: "Brer Jack, dish yer de chap w'at I bin tellin' you 'bout."

The little boy did as he was bid, but Daddy Jack grunted ungraciously and made no response to the salutation. He was evidently not fond of children. Uncle Remus glanced curiously at the dwarfed and withered figure, and spoke a little more emphatically.

"Brer Jack, ef you take good look at dis chap, I lay you'll see mo'n you 'speck ter see. You'll see sump'n dat'll make you grunt wusser dan you grunted deze many long year. Go up dar, honey, whar Daddy Jack kin see you."

The child went shyly up to the old African and stood at his knee. The sorrows and perplexities of nearly a hundred years lay between them; and now, as always, the baffled eyes of age gazed into the Sphinx-like face of youth as if by this means to unravel the mysteries of the past and solve the problems of the future.

Daddy Jack took the plump, rosy hands of the little boy in his black, withered ones, and gazed into his face so long and steadily, and with such curious earnestness that the child didn't know whether to laugh or cry. Presently the old African flung his hands to his head, and rocked his body from side to side, moaning and mumbling, and talking to himself, while the tears run down his face like rain.

"Ole Missy! Ole Missy! 'E come back! I bin shum dey-day, I bin shum de night! I bin yeddy 'e v'ice, I bin yeddy de sign!"†

"Ah-yi!" exclaimed Uncle Remus, into whose arms the little boy had fled; "I des know'd dat 'ud fetch 'im. Hit's bin manys de long days sence Brer Jack seed ole Miss, yit ef he aint seed 'er dat whack, den I aint settin' yer."

After awhile Daddy Jack ceased his rocking, and his moaning, and his crying, and sat gazing wistfully into the fire-place. Whatever he saw there fixed his attention, for Uncle Remus spoke to him several times, without receiving a response. Presently, however, Daddy Jack exclaimed with characteristic, but laughable irrelevance:

"I no lakky dem gal wut bin-a stan' pidjin-tee. Wun 'e fetch pail er water on 'e head, water churray, churry. I no lakky dem gal wut tie 'e wool up wit' string; mekky him stan' ugly fer true. I bin ahx da' 'Tildy gal fer marry me, un 'e no crack 'im bre't fer mek answer 'cep' 'e bre'k out un lahf by me werry face. Da' gal do holler un lahf un stomp 'e fut dey-dey, un dun I shum done gone pidjin-tee. Oona bin know da' 'Tildy gal?"

"I bin a-knowin' dat gal," said Uncle Remus, grimly regarding the old African. "I bin a-knowin' dat gal now gwine on sence she 'uz knee high ter one er deze yer puddle ducks; en I bin noticin' lately dat she mighty likely nigger."

"Enty!" exclaimed Daddy Jack, enthusiastically, "Enty! I did bin mek up to da' lilly gal troo t'ick un t'in. I bin fetch 'im one fine 'possum, un mo' ez one, two, t'ree peck-a taty, un bumbye I bin fetch 'im one bag pop-co'n. Wun I bin do dat, I is fley roun' da' lilly gal so long tam, un I yeddy 'im talk wit' turrer gal. 'E do say: 'Daddy Jack fine ole man fer true.' Dun I is bin talk: 'Oona no call-a me Daddy Jack wun dem preacher man come fer marry we.' Dun da' lilly gal t'row 'e head back; 'e squeal lak filly in canebrake."

The little boy understood this rapidly-spoken lingo perfectly well, but he would have laughed anyhow, for there was more than a suggestion of the comic in the shrewd seriousness that seemed to focus itself in Daddy Jack's pinched and wrinkled face.

"She tuck de truck w'at you tuck'n fotch 'er," said Uncle Remus, with the air of one carefully and deliberately laying the basis of a judicial opinion, "en den w'en you sail in en talk bizness, den she up en gun you de flat un 'er foot en de back un 'er han', en den, atter dat, she tuck'n lahff en make spote un you."

"Enty!" assented Daddy Jack, admiringly.

"Well, den, Brer Jack, youer mighty ole, en yit hit seem lak youer mighty young; kaze a man w'at aint got no mo' speunce wid wimmen folks dan w'at you is neenter creep 'roun' yer callin' deyse'f ole. Dem kiner folks aint ole nuff, let 'lone bein' too ole. W'en de gal tuck'n lahff, Brer Jack, w'at 'uz yo' nex' move?" demanded Uncle Remus, looking down upon the shriveled old man with an air of superiority.

Daddy Jack shut his shrewd little eyes tightly and held them so, as if by that means to recall all the details of the flirtation. Then he said:

"Da' lilly gal is bin tek dem t'ing. 'E is bin say, 'T'anky, t'anky.' Him eaty da' 'possum, him eaty da' pop-co'n, him roas'n da' taty. 'E do say, 'T'anky, t'anky!' Wun I talk marry, 'e is bin rise 'e v'ice un squeal lak lilly pig stuck in 'e t'roat. 'E do holler: 'Hi, Dandy Jack! wut is noung gal gwan do wit' so ole man lak dis?' Un I is bin say, 'Wut noung gal gwan do wit' ole Chrismus 'cep' 'e do 'joy 'ese'f?' Un da' lil gal 'e do lahff un flut 'ese'f way fum dey-dey."

"I know'd a nigger one time," said Uncle Remus, after pondering a moment, "w'at tuck a notion dat he want a bait er 'simmons, en de mo' w'at de notion tuck 'im de mo' w'at he want um, en bimeby, hit look lak he des natally erbleeged ter have um. He want de 'simmons, en dar dey is in de tree. He mouf water, en dar hang de 'simmons. Now, den w'at do dat nigger do? W'en you en me en dish yer chile yer wants 'simmons, we goes out en shakes de tree, en ef deyer good en ripe, down dey comes, en ef deyer good en green, dar dey stays. But dish yer yuther nigger, he too smart fer dat. He des tuck'n tuck he stan' und' de tree, en he open he mouf, he did, en wait fer de 'simmons fer ter drap in dar. Dey aint none drap in yit," continued Uncle Remus, gently knocking the cold ashes out of his pipe; "en w'at's mo', dey aint none gwine ter drap in dar. Dat des zackly de way wid Brer Jack yer, 'bout marryin'; he stan' dar, he do, en he hol' bofe han's wide open en he speck de gal gwine ter drap right spang in um. Man want gal, he des got ter grab 'er—dat's w'at. Dey may squall en dey may flutter, but flutter'n en squallin' aint done no damage yit ez I knows un, en 'taint gwine ter. Young chaps kin make great 'miration 'bout gals, but w'en dey gits ole ez I is, dey 'ull know dat folks is folks, en w'en it come ter bein' folks, de wimmen aint got none de 'vantage er de men. Now dat's des de plain up en down tale I'm a tellin' un you."

This deliverance from so respectable an authority seem to please Daddy Jack immensely. He rubbed his withered hands together, smacked his lips and chuckled. After a few restless movements, he got up and went shuffling to the door, his quick, short steps causing Uncle Remus to remark:

"De gal w'at git ole Brer Jack 'ull git a natchul pacer, sho'. He move mo' one-sideder dan ole Zip Coon, w'ich he rack up de branck all night long wid he nose p'int lak he gwine 'cross."

While the little boy was endeavorin to get Uncle Remus to explain the nature of Daddy Jack's grievances, muffled laughter was heard outside, and almost immediately 'Tildy rushed in the door. 'Tildy flung herself upon the floor and rolled and laughed until, apparently, she could laugh no more. Then she seemed to grow severely angry. She rose from the floor and flopped herself down in a chair, and glared at Uncle Remus with indignation in her eyes. As soon as she could control her inflamed feelings, she cried:

"W'at is I done ter you, Unk' Remus? 'Fo' de Lord, ef anybody wuz ter come en tole me dat you gwine ter put de Ole Boy in dat ole Affikin nigger head, I wouldn't er b'leeved um—dat I wouldn't. Unk' Remus, w'at is I done ter you?"

Uncle Remus made no direct response; but he leaned over, reached out his hand picked up an unfinished axe helve that stood in the corner. Then he took the little boy by the arm, and pushed him out of his way, saying in his gentlest and most persuasive tone:

"Stan' sorter 'roun' dar, honey, kase w'en de splinters 'gin ter fly, I want you ter be out'n de way. Miss Sally never gimme 'er fergivance in de 'roun' worl' ef you 'uz ter git hurted on accounter de frazzlin' er dish yer piece er timber."

Uncle Remus's movements and remarks had a wonderful effect on 'Tildy. Her anger disappeared, her eyes lost their malignant expression, and her voice fell to a conversational tone.

"Now, Unk' Remus, you oughtn't ter do me dat a-way, kaze I aint done nothin' ter you. I 'uz settin' up yon' in Aunt Tempy house, des now, runnin' on wid Riah, en yer come dat ole Affikin Jack en say you say he kin marry me ef he ketch me, en he try ter put he arm 'roun' me en kiss me."

'Tildy tossed her head and puckered her mouth at the bare remembrance of it.

"W'at wud did you gin Brer Jack?" inquired Uncle Remus, not without asperity.

"W'at I gwine tell 'im?" exclaimed 'Tildy, disdainfully. "I des tuck'n up en tole 'im he foolin wid de wrong nigger."

'Tildy would have continued her narration, but just at that moment the shuffing of feet was heard outside, and Daddy Jack came in, puffing and blowing and smiling. Evidently he had been hunting for 'Tildy in every house in the negro quarter.

"Hi!" he exclaimed, "lil gal, 'e bin skeet sem lak ma'sh hen. 'E no run no mo'."

"Pick 'er up, Brer Jack," exclaimed Uncle Remus; "she's yone."

'Tildy was angry as well as frightened. She would have fled, but Daddy Jack stood near the door.

"Look yer, nigger man!" she exclaimed, "ef you come slobbun 'roun' me, I'll take one er deze yer dog-iuns en brain you wid it. I aint gwine ter have no web-foot nigger follerin' atter me. Now you des come!—I aint feard er yo' cunjun. Unk' Remus, ef you got any intruss in dat ole Affikin ape, you better make 'im lemme 'lone. G'way fum yer, now!"

All this time Daddy Jack was slowly approaching 'Tildy, bowing and smiling, and looking quite dandified, as Uncle Remus afterward said. Just as the old African was about to lay hands upon 'Tildy, she made a rush for the door. The movement was so unexpected that Daddy Jack was upset. He fell upon Uncle Remus's shoe-bench, and then rolled off on the floor, where he lay clutching at the air, and talking so rapidly that nobody could understand a word he said. Uncle Remus lifted him to his feet with much dignity, and it soon became apparent that he was neither hurt nor angry. The little boy laughed immoderately, and he was still laughing when 'Tildy put her head in the door and exclaimed:

"Unk' Remus, I aint kilt dat ole nigger, is I? Kaze ef I got ter go ter de gallus, I want ter go dar fer sump'n n'er bigger'n dat."

Uncle Remus disdained to make any reply, but Daddy Jack chuckled and patted himself on the knee as he cried:

"Come 'long, lilly gal! come 'long! I no mad. I fall down dey for lahff. Come 'long, lilly gal, come 'long!"

'Tildy went off laughing loudly and talking to herself. After while Uncle Remus said:

"Honey, I speck Miss Sally lookin' und' de bed en axin' whar you is. You better leak out fum yer now, en by dis time ter-morrer night, I'll git Brer Jack all primed up, en he'll whirl in en tell you a tale."

Daddy Jack nodded assent, and the little boy ran laughing to the "big house."

†At first glance this dialect may seem difficult to understand. It is simplicity itself. It is simpler than that of the cotton plantations, and, in some respects, is an admirable vehicle for story-telling. It recognizes no gender, "'e" standing for "he," "she," and "it," at the pleasure of the narrator. It is laconic and yet rambling; full of repititions and abounding in elisions that give an unexpected quaintness to the simplest statements. A key to the whole vocabulary may be given in comparatively few words: "Oona" is "you," "all of you;" "churray," or "currah," is to spill, to splash, to drop; "shum," see or saw them; "yerry," "yeddy," hear or heard; "lil," "lilly," little; "tam," time; "sem," same; "lif," live; "leaf," leave; "beer," "teer," bear, tear; "mek," "tek," make, take; "y'et," earth; "bre't," breath; "da'," the; "dey-dey," down there, right here, or right there; "enty!" aint he! isn't that so!—an exclamation of astonishment, assent, or affirmation; "wut," what. The trick of adding a vowel sound to words is not unpleasing to the ear. Thus: "I bin-a wait fer you; come-a ring-a dem bell. Wut mek-a (or mekky) you stay so?" "Yeddy," "yerry," and probably "churray," are the result of this—heard a, yeard-a, yeddy; hear-a, year-a, yerry; chur-a, churray. When "eye" is written "y-eye," it is to be pronounced "yi." In such words as "back," "ax," a has the sound of ah. They are written "bahk," "ahx."

The Constitution Won't be Left.

From the Early County News.

That's an enterprising correspondent—quite up to the paper he represents. We hope the Telegraph and Messenger will not accuse THE CONSTITUTION of publishing stale news hereafter.

Beecher's Vacation.

NEW YORK, August 18.—The members of Plymouth church unanimously indorsed a proposition to extend the vacation of their pastor so that he can lecture in some of the southern cities.

BY THE YEW HEDGE.

Up and down the terrace pacing, where the winter sunlight glowed,
And the sound of falling waters timed my foot-steps as I trode.
Pacing where the tall yew hedges kept the bitter blast away,
And the noontide smiled like summer on the January day.

Up and down the terrace pacing for a musing hour alone,
While the river's music mingled with the baffled east wind's moan;
And a presence seemed beside me, very close and very dear,
A strong hand my hand was clasping, a low voice was in my ear.

Words of counsel, words of comfort, words of dear companionship,
And the blue eyes spoke as softly as the mobile, eager lip;
Hope grew brighter grief grew sweeter, doubt, ashamed, shrunk quite away,
As we two paced on together in the January day.

Swift and sweet the moments passed me as the sunshine paled o'erhead,
And to common life returning fell the slow, reluctant tread;
Yet my hushed heart from its commune, patience, strength and courage drew,
And north skies with southern splendor gilded all the darkling yew.

THE RAILROADS.

CROSS-TIE GOSSIP IN AND OUT OF ATLANTA RAILROAD CIRCLES.

Railroad Needs in Marion—Buena Vista and the Central—A Charter Asked for a Line from Tennessee to Florida The Marietta and North Georgia—General Railroad Notes.

THE Cincinnati Enquirer says, Mr. W. S. St. George, who has held the position of general southern agent of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific road, at Atlanta, Ga., has been appointed general agent of the road at Louisville. Mr. St. George, who is a bright, efficient and progressive railroad man, succeeds J. F. Ewing, who has resigned to accept a position with the Bee Line. Mr. St. George, besides being a good railroad man, is an affable gentleman, and will doubtlessly be welcomed by the Louisville brotherhood as well as the people in general.

CHATTANOOGA, August 18.—The board of trade will hold a special meeting Monday night to consider the proposition of the president of the Cincinnati Southern railway that the consolidated shops of the entire system will be located here if the city donates the ground.

Railroad Needs in Marion.

From the Sumter Republican.

The citizens of Marion are to hold a mass meeting at Buena Vista, on Thursday, the 23d inst., in the interest of railroad facilities for their section. They give a grand barbecue on the occasion, and invite all who feel so inclined to come and partake. We are creditably informed that at least three routes are spoken of—one from Buena Vista via Bostwick, on the Muscogee railroad, one via Oglethorpe and the other via Americus. Each route has its advocates, but upon one thing all are agreed—they must have railroad communication, and are willing to contribute of their means to secure this. What will Americus do in the matter? Will she lie quiet and let slip her golden opportunity? Will not some of her wide-awake citizens take steps to have her represented at that meeting? Nay, more, will they not see to it than those who may represent her there are authorized to make definite propositions looking towards bringing the road here? We hope some one may take interest in the matter, and that such action may be had as will promote her welfare. Who will take the initiatory?

From Buena Vista—to Where?

Mr. Thomas P. Lumpkin, of Buena Vista, who is in the city, informs us that there is every probability of a road being built from that town to some point on the Central road.

The Central road has agreed that it will rail, equip and run the branch road if the people will grade it, provide and lay the crossties. It is provided that the road will run from Buena Vista to either Bostick, Americus or Oglethorpe, and their connect with the Central—the distance to either point varying from twenty-six to thirty miles. A company has already been chartered to build to Bostick, and about $28,000 of the needed $50,000 has been raised.

It is proposed, however, to get charters to each of the other points and let each point compete for the road. Columbus is interested in having it go to Bostick. Either of the three possible points can afford to subscribe liberally to secure the road and the trade of the rich country behind it. Marion is reported by the agricultural department as the best farming county in the state, and this new line of road would be a feeder that would add thousands of dollars to the trade of the city from which it was built. Americus, Oglethorpe or Columbus could well afford to subscribe $50,000 to get this road. We hope to see it built.

From Tennessee to Florida.

Mr. Hulsey, of Fulton, yesterday introduced a bill to charter the Atlantic, Gulf and Northwestern railroad. The following are named as the incorporators:

James McKnex, T. J. Knox, G. L. Smith, H. B. Hemgar, W. H. McKanny and T. P. Mayfield, of Tennessee; T. J. Rutledge, J. M. Riggs, W. D. Wardsworth and Alexander Troy, of Alabama; C. J. Wellborn, Thomas F. Greer, Frank L. Haralson, John A. Stewart, Daniel Pittman, George A. Wallace, John G. Martin, Robert L. Sibley, John L. Wise, Joel Brewer, J. B. Latimer, M. Gremley, T. C. Hemgar, Hiram Warner Hill, J. F. C. Williams, F. M. Brooks, H. C. Johnson, L. B. Griggs, James Casteberry, John L. Hudson, Benj E. Russell, and A. J. Moore, of Georgia; B. C. Quinn and A. W. Quinn, of Florida. The company is given in the bill the right to erect a railroad with the usual privileges from Ducktown on the Tennessee and Georgia line to Apalachecola, Apalachacor St. Marks, Florida, and also from some point in Polk county to Atlanta. The usual privileges granted to railroads, such as right to condemn property, etc., are included in the charter of the Atlantic, Gulf and Northwestern.

The Marietta and North Georgia.

Resolved by the grand jury empanelled and sworn at the present August term, 1883, of Cherokee superior court, that we do not and are satisfied that very few of the citizens of our county indorse or concur in the resolution published in the Cherokee Advance and THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION as having been adopted at a meeting held in Canton on Tuesday the 14th instant.

We are satisfied that not one out of fifty of our citizens desire the suspension of work on the Marietta and North Georgia railroad, or that the convicts shall be taken from the road as now managed.

In the meeting in which the resolutions were passed not more than six voted for them.

We ask that the Cherokee Advance and THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION publish this resolution, and that a copy be sent to our representative, Colonel W. A. Teasley, and he is requested to use all diligence and fair means to see that the interests of our section are protected and the completion of the road now progressing so well allowed to proceed without hindrance.

8. Delivery of prize, Porter King.

The governor and a large number of prominent gentlemen from all parts of the state will be present on the stage.

The well known powers of Hon. Emory Speer insure a literary treat in the oration, while the high order of talent of the other ladies and gentlemen who have lent their services to this occasion render the success of the programme assured.

The largest audience of the season is expected for the occasion. Admission free, and all the friends of the library are cordially invited.

The Bets Off.

The Reid-Reagan race matter is ended by the following announcement which was agreed upon yesterday:

To the stakeholders of the recent race and all others whom it may concern:—Gentlemen—As referee, after understanding that neither Mr Reagan or Mr. Reid are willing to run the race over, as I decided, and thought they should do, and as both now refuse to run again, I therefore declare the race a draw, and suggest that all stakes and bets on the race be refunded to the parties who put them up.

FATAL CUTTING AFFRAY

The Old Exposition Hotel Witnesses Another Blood-Letting.

There was another row at the old Exposition hotel last night about 9 o'clock. The leading actors in the difficulty were Joe Wall and Frank McIntyre, two white men, and each had an abundance of supporters. When the intelligence of the affair first came to the city it was stated that McIntyre had been brutally murdered by Wall, and Captain Aldridge at once repaired to the scene of the difficulty. There it was ascertained that Wall and a party of friends went up to the Exposition hotel entrance. At the door they met McIntyre who was coming out of the building. Wall, without any apparent provocation informed McIntyre that if he came out of the building he would kill him. McIntyre paid no attention to Wall's threats, and as soon as McIntyre stepped outside the door Wall drove his knife into McIntyre's groin, inflicting a wound inches in length. As soon as Wall inflicted the cut he ran, but McIntyre followed and knocked him in the head with a brick, inflicting a dangerous wound. Wall was carried to his house, where he now is in a dangerous condition. McIntyre's injuries are painful, but not dangerous.

POLICE NEWS.

Wm. Beck, charged with larceny, was arrested by Officer McGhee last night.

Mr. James Blakeman, who lives on Moore street, was stricken down last night with congestion of the bowels. His condition at midnight was exceedingly critical.

Jno. Clarke, the negro who made the assault upon Officer Taylor one night about two weeks ago, with a knife, and made his escape, was arrested last night by Officers Taylor and Lynam.

There was a big negro ball on Harris street night before last, and some of the negroes made two attempts to fire the old furniture factory building on that street. Captain Crim's timely arrival prevented the total destruction of the building.

Shopworn Small Instruments at One-half Price.

In order to get ready for fall trade we will sell between now and the first day of September a lot of brass instruments, accordeons, guitars, banjos, harmonicas and other small instruments at half price. These instruments are for use as good as new. They are only a little marred in external appearance. We are determined to commence the fall trade with only fresh new stock. Bring in your cash. Now is the time for bargains. ESTEY ORGAN COMPANY,
Corner Broad and Alabama sts., Atlanta, Ga.

The Chess Club.

The chess club met at five o'clock yesterday afternoon in the library, and elected Captain John Milledge president, and Messrs. J. B. Redwine and Mr. Mitchell vice presidents. Mr. Joe Wyly was elected secretary and treasurer. The name selected was the "Atlanta Chess and Checkers club." The club will meet next Friday afternoon at five o'clock.

Mr. Vorhis Elected.

Lieutenant Ed. L. Vorhis has been elected president of the Atlanta Musical union, vice W. W. Austell, resigned. The reorganization means the speedy uniforming of the band, the organization of a chorus composed of the elite of the city, the bringing here of first class artists, both vocal and instrumental, and the inauguration of a new era in musical circles that will unite and make us proud of the local musical talent of the city.

Melon Shipments.

Melon shipments from Atlanta via the Western and Atlantic railroad yesterday were 15 cars, of which the Georgia railroad brought in 13, the Central railroad 1, and the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia 1. Distribution as follows: Cincinnati 13, Louisville 1, Cheraw 1.

No Trouble.

In selling our new organs and pianos. They speak for themselves and sell themselves as fast as we can get them. The trouble is to sell the second-hand instruments we are constantly taking in exchange for new. In order to close them out, we offer them at prices that would paralyze an auction room, viz: $20 and upwards. At these prices it is cheaper to buy than to rent. Call and satisfy yourselves. REAL ESTATE AFFAIRS.

Friday Mr. Hoke Smith let the contract for his new residence on Peachtree street to Longley and Robinson. The cost of his new house will be $6,500. Fay and Eichberg are the architects.

Mr. W. P. Patillo will build a new residence on the site of his present one, that will be a beautiful addition to his new section of the city. The plans are now prepared and work will be begun at once.

Mr. W. M. Dickson has approved the plans of a New York architect for a residence on Peachtree street. He has one of the best lots on the street, and the house will be a fitting supplement to the lot. It is designed after a house in France that the architect saw while abroad.

The Gate City Guard, through Captain Jackson, has bought from Mrs. Gip Greer a lot on Peachtree street adjoining the armory, which gives them 55 feet front by 100 feet deep. On this they can make a magnificent armory. Work will be begun at once and finished this fall. The company now owns a handsome building and the addition will cost about $15,000. The people of Atlanta should sustain the company handsomely and help them build an armory that will be a pride to the city.

A short time since Mr. William E. Dodge, of New York, was in Atlanta. While here he became interested in St. Luke's church and purchased for seven thousand dollars cash the lot in the rear of the church and gave it as a present. Plans for enlarging the church to more than double its present size have already been accepted and the lumber and brick are now in hand to begin the work. The seating capacity will be 800. Mr. W. B. Lowe has donated all the lumber that will be needed in the building and various other donations are reported. The work will be pushed through at once as additional pews are needed.

Washington Gazette: "Our esteemed friend, Mr. R. A. Hemphill, rolled in on the boom created by the extra number of THE CONSTITUTION published last Monday. The people of this place very highly appreciated this enterprise on the part of that great paper in giving the interesting details of the burning of the Kimball, by an extra edition; and brother Hemphill added greatly to his list of subscribers and to the exchequer of THE CONSTITUTION."

Mr. John J. Woodside and bride, nee Miss Maggie Roberts, left a few days since for Louisville, Cincinnati and other western cities. Mr. and Mrs. Woodside will remain several weeks in Louisville viewing the exposition. Mr. Woodside's home was in Louisville previous to his advent in Atlanta, where, by his many sterling qualities, he succeeded in winning not only the friendship and esteem of Atlanta's business men, but one of Atlanta's most charming young society ladies for his helpmate through life. Mr. Woodside is now associated with his father-in-law, Captain E. M. Roberts, in the real estate business in this city.

CIRCULAR NO. 40

OFFICE OF THE RAILROAD COMMISSION,
ATLANTA, GA., August 16th, 1883.

JAMES M. SMITH,
CAMPBELL WALLACE, } Commissioners.
J. N. TRAMMELL,

JOINT RATES ON COTTON.

1st—In accordance with circular No. 34, section 15, joint rates on cotton between all stations of the various roads owned, leased or operated by the Central railroad will be no more than twenty (20) per cent on standard tariff, computed as required in Rule One. No advance in rates now existing on cotton from competitive points or stations injuriously affected thereby is intended to be allowed by this circular.

2d—The maximum rates of the Savannah, Florida and Western railroad on cotton shall be no more than thirty (30) per cent on "Standard Tariff."

EMPTY BARRELS.

3d—Rates authorized to be charged in circular No. 20, section 2d, on barrels, half barrels and kegs empty, L. C. L. except ale and beer barrels, are charged as follows: For 10 miles and under, 8 cents per 100 pounds; for 20 miles and over 10 miles, 9 cents; 30 miles and over 20 miles, 10 cents; 40 and over 30 miles, 10 cents; 50 and over 40 miles, 11 cents; 60 and over 50 miles, 11 cents; 70 and over 60 miles, 12 cents. For all other distances class "R" remains unchanged.

NARROW GAUGE STANDARD CAR LOAD WEIGHT.

4th—Narrow gauge railroads in fixing rates on articles enumerated in classes "N," "O" and "P," and on other freights where a rate per car load is given in classification, will count fifteen thousand pounds for a car load and estimate their charge pro rata with rate allowed on standard gauge.

CHARGE FOR EXCESS FREIGHT.

5th—All permission heretofore given by circular or classification, allowing railroads to charge extra on excess freight where more than the car load allowance is put on the car, is hereby repealed, and a pro rata charge of the car load rate only will be allowed hereafter for the excess. This rule applies to standard weights respectively allowed broad and narrow gauge railroads.

POSTPONEMENT OF CIRCULARS NOS. 27 AND 28.

6th—All of circulars Nos. 27 and 28, except section 3d, of circular No. 28, are for the present indefinitely postponed.

7th—This circular to take effect Monday, September the 17th, 1883, and all circulars, or parts of circulars, in conflict therewith, are hereby repealed.

By order of the Board.

DR. CHEEVER'S ELECTRIC BELT, or Regenerator, is made expressly for the cure of derangement of the procreative organs. Whenever any debility of the generative organs occurs, from whatever cause, a continuous stream of ELECTRICITY permeating through the parts must restore them to healthy action. There is no mistake about this instrument. Years of use have tested it, and thousands of cures are testified to. Weakness from Indiscretion, Incapacity, Lack of Vigor, Sterility—in fact, any troubles of these organs is cured. Do not confound this with electric belts advertised to cure all ills from head to toe. BILL ARP

GETS INTO AN AGRICULTURAL STRAIN.

Cobe's Contentment Drawn from Evils of the Past–Good Reports from the Crops, but No Reliance on Prices–Corners of the Market Centers.

I was reading Tom Hardeman's and Dr. Leland's speech and the other speeches made in the farmer's convention, and then I read Judge Henderson's last crop report, and got to ruminating upon the general situation, and altogether it did not make me feel hilarious by no means. My own crop is enough to give me the blues, if I would take 'em, and so when I read about trouble all around I feel like saying with the old preacher–"Its mighty bad–powerful bad–but we thank Thee, oh Lord, that it is as well with us as it is." Cobe says he "ain't makin' a blessed thing–no corn, no 'taters, no cotton, no nuthin'–and Willy is down with the newmony, and the chickens all died with the cholera;" and then he gave a three-cornered grin and squeezed his tobacco between his teeth as he remarked, "but major it aint nigh as bad as it mout be; it aint nigh as bad as war." Then he stuck his heels in the little mule's flanks and away he went galloping up the road. There used to be a bureau called the bureau of refugees and abandoned lands, and Cobe says if them yankees will revive it now he is about ready to jine the concern. Says he will do most anything except beg or steal, or go to the poor house. So when I feel melancholly I think about Cobe and cheer up. The truth is, we all borrow too much trouble. It is better to look back once in a while and recall the vast amount of fears and forebodings that were wasted and maybe that will give us brighter hopes of the future.

Judge Henderson gives us very reliable crop reports for the state. He has reliable agents in every county–men of observation and judgment. Commissioner Loring, at Washington, gives us reliable reports from all the states, but neither can tell us what the ruling price will be for cotton, or corn, or wheat, or pork, or beef cattle. That is settled in New York and Chicago. Neither the weather nor Providence has anything to do with it. I see by the papers that they are fixing up for another big corner on wheat in Chicago and they have already got their agents all over the northwest buying it up at a low price and they will hold for a high price. Wheat never advances much until the rascals have bought most of it–not until they have bought all that the average poor farmer has to sell. That is just what is the matter with our people. Both the farmer and the average consumer are alike the victims of the speculator. The farmer has to sell too low and the consumer has to buy too high. There is no general average–no uniformity. Rich farmers who can afford to hold seem to like these corners pretty well. They get a big price by holding and waiting for the Chicago bulls. But the masses of the farmers have to sell soon after the harvest and the masses of the laborers and mechanicks fatten for awhile on cheap flour, which I suppose puts them in a better condition to perish after while when the price is doubled. Figures don't lie and the figures say that in 1879 most of the wheat was sold by farmers at 85 cents and after the Chicago bulls had bought it they run it up to $1.33. In 1881 it was sold for 95 and the bulls run it to $1.45. When they had bought all they could they blocaded the elevators and the railroads with it to keep down competition and prevent the holders who still had some to sell from getting it to market. Now what ought to be done with them fellows who make their millions out of the life blood of the poor. We regulate railroads by a commission and we get after the distillers with the whole power of the government, but these cornerers who suck the blood of labor and toil are allowed to go free. They patronize the banks liberally and therefore the banks are their friends, and the banks control congress and so we have no relief.

There is an epitaph on the toomb of Sir Robert Peel, and it says, "He gave the poor cheap bread," and no man has a nobler one than this. But here sits the American congress and the state legislatures looking on at all this iniquity and do nothing. How do they expect labor to be reconciled to capital and everything go on smoothly when the common laborer can barely live at his wages, and suddenly finds that bread and meat have gone up fifty per cent, and that rich, heartless speculators have combined against him? How can he be reconciled? How can he be kept from thinking and talking and drifting into communism and organizing strikes for higher wages. There is life and death in this business. The average age of the rich is 55–of the poor it is 35. Only eighty children out of a thousand die among the wealthy classes, but three hundred die among the poor. As food grows dear sickness and death grows plenty. Scarcer bread means more abundant crime; larceny increases as flour advances. The common laborer who works in the shops or the factories for daily wages gets barely enough for bread and meat and clothing when these things are cheap. He gets nothing for luxuries, nothing for comforts, nothing for sickness or doctors bills or old age. Nothing for the accidents of life, a broken leg, or a broken arm. Nothing for fire or flood, or pestilence or any other calamity. He has to live by faith and hope–a shrinking faith and a dispairing hope, and a continual apprehension for the welfare of his children. The great question with us all is what will become of our children. Will they be able to weather the storms of life when we are gone? Will they find employment and be able to live comfortably, and marry respectably and have a good home and be happy? We hope so–we pray for it and work for it, but there is less hope for the next generation than the last, for the rich are getting richer and more heartless and the poor are getting more dependent. When a man makes a fortune at legitimate trading it is all right and honorable, but when he builds up by pulling somebody else down it is all wrong and not only dishonorable but criminal. The laws of England forbid it. The laws of the United States do too, but they don't enforce them. Forestalling the market is a crime in all civilized countries but ours. When Armour bought up 500,000 barrels of pork and a million more in futures at nine dollars a barrel and sold out at eighteen he made seven millions of dollars but he never produced anything or added one dollar to that already produced. What he made somebody else lost. He made it all out of the consumer–that is the masses–chiefly the poor. What kind of a epitaph ought to be put on his toombstone? "This man's greed was great–his pity was small. If there be a hell he is enjoying it." In 1881 the Chicago syndicate cornered 70 million bushels of wheat. Why, what protection have the people got? What security against starvation. General Toombs once made a very notable speech and said he would lead his children to an altar and like Hamalcar of old, swear them to eternal hostility against this foul domination, and just so I feel whenever I read about Armour and Keene, and Jay Gould and company and ponder upon their machinations. I want to lead my children to an altar and swear them–yes swear them to fight monopolies, to fight these forestallers and cornerers and plunderers of the working people.

Now I don't know that any of these corners have damaged me a cent. I thank the good Lord that I am not in their power and that I live in a good old state that has not yet bowed the knee to Baal and whose people are comparatively independent of these rings and syndicates but northern morals and northern rapacity is drifting this way and a people forewarned are a people forearmed. I am thinking about my children and grand children. Our fathers have left us a goodly land and a goodly heritage and our children will have to preserve it if it is preserved at all. We want none of Iagos' maxims–"get money–get money–honestly if thou can'st–but at all events get money." It is every man's duty to contribute something to the general welfare. If he does not, he may possibly be a good man, but he is not a good citizen. If on the contrary, he adds to the burdens or the miseries of his fellow men, he is a public nuisance and ought to be abated. If I was sworn on a jury to try Armour & Co., for robbery, I would find them guilty, for they have robbed thousands of their daily food. They robbed the farmer by "bearing" his products and the consumer by "bulling them." They are scientific thieves, but infinitely more criminal than the vagabond who steals a horse. Larceny is more tolerble than force. Your articles on taxation are instructive and give us food for thought. I hope they will wake up our representatives in congress. I heard Judge Wright say once that if the people knew how much tax they paid to support the government at Washington they would shoulder their shotguns and go to fighting, and I reckon they would. And it is a wonder to me that our working people don't do something desperate when flour is jumped up from five dollars to eight dollars a barrel and meat as much in proportion through the operations of these corners. But the poor are humble and have few friends. Nothing is left them but to suffer and be strong.

I have suffered 37 years with liver complaint, Rheumatism, Sick Headache and disordered Stomach. I was at one time raving distracted, rubbing my hands and half crazy with pain. My wife sent for a doctor and he attended me 9 months. He said he could do me no good. I felt I was in the jaws of death. Another physician took me in charge and doctored me 18 months. I paid him $33 and owe him $40 more, but one bottle of ROSADALIS did me more good than all the medcine the doctors ever gave me.

Piles.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price, 50 cents. By Telegraph.

NEW YORK, August 18.–The stock market to-day was less active than on any previous day of the week. In the early dealings there was a disposition to realize profits, under which prices receded ½ to 2 per cent, the latter in Denver. Texas Pacific fell off 1⅛ to 27¾. Western Union was strong from the opening on the settlement of the strike. This stock opened ¾ per cent higher at 76¼ reacted to 76, and then gradually rose to 78¾, with the final sales at 78⅝. In the general list, before 1 o'clock, there were indications of good buying, and later in the day this was borne out by a higher range of quotations, and the best prices of the day and week were made in some instances. The improvement outside of Western Union ranged from ¼ to 1⅜ per cent. At the close Denver was again pressed for sales and returned to 29½, it having previously rallied to 30½. This weakness was due partly to disappointment arising from the refusal of Mr Cassatt to accept the presidency. The decline in this stock at the close affected the market unfavorably and caused a reaction of ⅛ to ⅝ per cent from the highest price of the afternoon. As compared with last night, some shares are higher and others lower. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy is 1⅛, Lake Shore ¼ Omaha ⅜ and ¾. Wabash preferred ⅛, and Western Union 2⅝ per cent higher, while the other stocks are ¼ to ⅛ per cent lower. Denver, however, shows a decline of 1⅞ per cent. In specialties, Chicago and Alton rose 1 to 32, and Manhattan Elevator 3¼ to 41¼; Colorado coal fell off 2 to 24, and Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus and Indianapolis 1 to 3. Sales of stocks for the week aggregated 2,533,691, an increase of 625,021 as compared with the week ended August 11, and 1,750,166 as compared with the week ended August 4. Transactions aggregated 234,000 shares.

THROUGH THE CITY.

A GLIMPSE OF CURRENT EVENTS IN ATLANTA.

The Day's Doings in Public Offices—The Record of the Courts, the Railroads and the Hotels—Real Estate Operations—Gossip of All Kinds—Items of General Interest, Etc.

CHIEF RYAN, of the fire department, wants an additional supply of fire alarm boxes.

A STEET car mule in service on the Decatur street line dropped dead near the cemetery yesterday morning.

THE candidates for alderman to succeed Alderman Lowry, whose term expires this year, are already multiplying rapidly.

THE occupants of the jail are organizing a minstrel company. They have rehearsels every day and the audience and performers are alike prisoners.

THE residence of Mr. C. W. Maxwell on Garnett street was entered by a burglar night before last and a silver watch and a small amount of change were stolen.

NIGHT before last a thief entered Charles Johnson's stable on Williams street and was in the act of leading away Johnson's mule when Johnson's wife awoke and scared the thief away.

THE residence of Mr. J. H. Kemper on Larkin street was entered by a thief early yesterday morning while the family was at breakfast and a pair of pants and a couple of shirts were stolen.

SOME vandal got in a good nights work on Plum street last night. On that street there is a neat unoccupied cottage and during Friday night every window glass in the front of the cottage was broken out. A half bushel of stones were found in the room yesterday morning.

THE Jim Kelly, who was engaged in the row at the corner of Beermann and Peters streets a few nights ago, was not Mr. James Kelly, a member of the Atlanta police force. Officer Kelly is now well and happy and gets seven days work out of every week.

ON Friday evening last a merry party of ladies and gentlemen assembled at the hospitable residence of Mr. John L. Tye in West End. Mr. Tye has been spending some time in the city with his family and before leaving for McDonough, assembled some of his friends for a parting supper. Never was a supper better served or enjoyed. Mr. Tye and his charming wife will be much missed.

A NEW BANK.

Charter Asked for the Mechanics' Savings Bank o Atlanta.

Yesterday, Mr. Hulsey, of Fulton, introduced a bill in the house of representatives to charter the Mechanics' savings bank of Atlanta. The incorporators are Messrs. Paul Romare, W. W. Austell, R. H. Richards, W. B. Cox, H. T. Inman and B. F. Abbott. The capital stock of the bank is to be $50,000. The gentlemen whose names are mentioned as incorporators are well known and are already prominent in banking circles.

It is said that the stock will be taken at once and the new bank will probably soon be among the business institutions of Atlanta.

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Mr. G. G. Barrett of this City Dies from a Hemorrhage of the Lungs.

Mr. G. G Barrett, a well known and highly esteemed employe of the Southern express company, died very suddenly at his home, corner of Jenkins and Gilmer streets, Friday night. About three weeks ago Mr. Barrett had a violent hemorrhage of the lungs, which necessitated his temporary retirement from service, but by careful attention he had almost entirely recovered his strength and was expecting to resume his duties again this week. About seven o'clock night before last he was sitting at home talking to his wife and his mother in the best condition possible physically and mentally. But while the conversation was going on Mr. Barrett suddenly started towards the door saying he believed he was going to have another hemorrhage. His mother followed him just in time to catch him in her arms as he fell to the floor a large stream of blood rushing from his mouth. Dr. Willis Westmoreland was hastily summoned but Mr. Barrett died within a few minutes. His condition was such early yesterday morning that his immediate burial was found necessary, and the remains were interred in Oak and yesterday evening. The pall bearers were Messrs. Rogers, Lovett, Irwin, Williams and Cochran, all employes of the express company. Mr. Barrett's two brothers, who are also in the express company were absent from the city and telegrams failed to reach either of them in time for their arrival for the funeral. Mr. Barrett was for years in the service of the express company and by his faithful attention to his duties won the respect, esteem and confidence of the officers of the company. He leaves a wife and two children, a mother and two brothers to mourn his loss.

THE NEW CHAMBER.

A Talk With Mr. Cottingham About the New Chamber of Commerce Building.

Yesterday a CONSTITUTION man met Captain Cottingham, secretary of the chamber of commerce, and hurled the following batch of interrogation marks at him:

"What is the status of affairs in the chamber? What are the various committees doing and when will the work of constructing the new building begin, and in fact I want all the news about the chamber in detail."

"To begin with, we have had some little trouble in our building committee. Several of those elected resigned, and their places were filled by electing Mr. John Mcoaslin and J. W. English to the vacancies. The committee, with Mr. Julius L. Brown chairman, will set to work in earnest pretty soon to devise means with which to rear a building which will be a pride to the city. The committee meets on Tuesday next to perfect plans and specifications. We have asked for designs from the architects of Atlanta and elsewhere, and expect to have many plans submitted out of which to select the best and most modern and improved style of architecture. When such has been done the work will be pushed vigorously. The chamber consists at present of 218 members, every one of whom has paid in the fee required."

"How about circular letter No 2 in regard to eastern freights?"

The governing board issued a request to the members of the chamber to ship all eastern freight over the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, to which letter I have responses of 124 of the best and heaviest shippers in the chamber, declaring their determination to do as requested and all their goods are now shipped on the one line. What the result will be we can't tell, but surely they are not in any worse condition than before. We have just begun and expect to continue in our efforts to secure what we think is due Atlanta as a central distributing city until every means is exhausted. The committee have not as yet determined upon a line from the west upon which to consolidate. They thought it would be wise to wait until it was seen what the negotiations pending in railroad circles in regard to an 'Ohio river' pool would result in, after which I suppose they will act."

"What is your opinion as to the eventual accomplishment of the end in view?"

"That is hard to tell, and besides I prefer not to express an opinion. The governing committee have the whole matter in charge, and I know they will not leave a stone unturned to set Atlanta on an equality with other cities in the matter of freights. If they fail, it will be after every means in their power is exhausted. I can't believe, however, that after the statistics are given, and a fair, full and open discussion had, that the railroads will refuse to accord to us what we deem right, just and proper. I have followed the railroad business for a life time, and I know that it is the policy of the roads to do justice to all of their patrons—but what they will do, the future alone can determine."

A MUSIC FESTIVAL.

Herr August Doepp to Treat Atlanta to a First-Class Festival in the Fall.

Herr August Doepp, the distinguished musical manager, is here for the purpose of arranging the preliminaries of the music festival which is to take place in Atlanta next October. A CONSTITUTION reporter called upon him to ascertain his plans and purposes. Herr Doepp was found in his room surrounded by several musical friends, all of whom were engaged in a spirited conversation touching the coming event. He cordially received the reporter and readily consented to talk about the project. Herr Doepp is a gentleman about thirty-five years old, of ruddy complexion, and a decidedly foreign appearance. He is voluble and affable, and when talking on the subject of the coming festival his features light up with intelligence and animation. He is full of the scheme, and seems to be a gentleman of indomitable pluck and energy. Already he has achieved distinction for having successfully managed large musical organizations in Europe and this country. The reporter asked:

"I learn that you are in the city with a view of giving us a grand musical festival similar to those held in Boston, New York and Cincinnati?"

"Yes, sir; that is my intention."

"When will the festival occur?"

"I think about the last week in October or the first week in November. It will be given in DeGive's opera house. The time will depend in a great measure upon the dates which I may be able to secure from Mr. DeGive."

"How did the idea of the festival originate?"

"I managed the music festival which was so successfully carried out in Charleston last November, and the idea occurred to me that one could be as successful in Atlanta or New Orleans. I made a visit here last February, and as soon as I mentioned my project to some of the leading musicians who immediately hailed the idea with enthusiasm and offered me their hearty co-operation."

"How long will the festival last?"

"Three days, during which three concerts and one matinee will be given."

"What attractions will you offer?"

"The principal attractions will be the Royal Saxonian Orchestra, of Dresden, which is complete. In fact it is one of the finest orchestras in Germany. With regard to precision in ensemble playing this orchestra can not be surpassed. Its repertoire embraces upward of fifteen hundred pieces. I heard them perform abroad during my sojourn in Germany last spring and I at once began negotiations for an engagement with them in America. In addition to this splendid corps of musicians I will have soloists of distinction and the largest and best drilled choruses ever heard in the south. I shall bring into requisition the best musical talent from all the towns and cities adjacent to Atlanta."

A rivalry between the various towns will spring up and this will induce each community to send its best vocal talent. In this way I shall secure admirably drilled delegations of singers, and when they all come together for the final rehearsals there will be little or no trouble in perfecting them in their different parts. Then the orchestra will need no rehearsals, for they are thoroughly familiar with the works which I design producing. My experience teaches me that amateurs cannot be depended on, so I have secured this highly skilled orchestra."

"I presume you will incur very heavy expenses, which will make it necessary to charge extra high rates?"

"While it is true that my expenses will be very heavy, yet I have determined to make the prices popular. That is to say, one dollar for general admission and fifty cents extra for reserved seats. The attendance will be large enough, I think, to enable me to do this, for crowds, no doubt, will come from many points."

"Have you any misgivings as to the success of the festival?"

"No, sir, none whatever. I have too much confidence in the public spirit and liberality of the people of Atlanta to apprehend a failure. It is impossible for it to fail. I propose to make it the grandest affair of the kind ever held in Georgia and I believe all music lovers will come to my support in this my effort to popularize art. I intend to stay here until the festival is over. I will work night and day to make it a success. Already I have received the most cordial reception and I have the promise of substantial support from some of the best citizens. Many of those whom I have approached on the subject are enthusiastic."

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

The Objects and Work of the Knights Described—The Recent Strike.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: In your issue of August 17, you say:

"The tale told by the Baltimore telegraphers who were induced to strike, relying on the promises of the Knights of Labor to see them through, furnishes a lesson for every workingman. His best friend is to be found in his own personal self reliance, and not in the cheap promises of men who, while urging others to go out upon uncertainty, keep a close grip upon their own positions and money."

The tale referred to, and published in the same issue of your paper, is as follows: "It is now said that the Knights of Labor did not respond as liberally as was expected, and surrender was necessary on the part of many of those who left their keys when the strike was inaugurated."

In your issue of August 18th, you again refer, editorially, to the subject, and say:

"The real secret of the strike seems to be that the assessments made upon the individual members of the brotherhood had reached a considerable sum, and about the only way to dispose of it was to order a strike."

Whether the brotherhood of telegraphers, which is one of the district assemblies of the order of the Knights of Labor, prepared themselves before the strike with funds by assessments on its members, I am unable to say. But to show that they were not "relying on the promises of the Knights of Labor to see them through," as you state it, I will quote from the constitution of the general assembly Knights of Labor. Article xix, section 1, is as follows:

Neither the grand assembly nor any of its officers can legally approve, sanction or authorize a strike by any local assembly or district assembly in the order, and no assessment can be levied upon the order or any portion of it by the executive board of the general assembly, or any of its grand officers, for the support of any strike; but nothing in this section shall prevent the executive board of the general assembly from authorizing the grand secretary to issue an appeal for voluntary contriouotion in aid of any district or local on a strike, when, after due examination, the board are satisfied that all reasonable means of preventing the strike had been exhausted before the members were ordered out. No strike shall be legalized by any district or local assembly until all efforts to settle the difficulty have been exhusted."

The Knights of Labor entertain views diametrically opposed to your opinions as expressed in the editorial paragraph first quoted. We hold that the working man's best friend is not found in his own personal self-reliance, but that in organization and co-operation—the chief means by which capitalists are enabled to combine with their interests and accomplish what, as individuals, they were unable to do—of all "who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow," is to be found the true solution of the labor problem. The order of the Knights of Labor is not a mere trade union or beneficial society; it was not founded simply to protect one interest or to discharge one duty, be it ever so great; it is more and higher. It gathers into one fold all branches of honorable toil, without regard to nationality, sex, creed or color. [No lawyer, banker, rum-seller or professional gambler can be admitted.] It aims to assist every member to better his condition, morally, socially, financially. While acknowledging that it is sometimes necessary to enjoin an oppressor, yet strikes are to be avoided whenever possible, as strikes afford but temporary relief. Members are educated to depend upon thorough organization, co-operation and political action to accomplish the abolishment of the wage system and its attendant evils.

Among the higher duties taught in the assemblies of the order are the substitution of arbitration for strikes, whenever possible, the abrogation of all laws that do not bear equally on capital and labor, the abolishment of the contract system on national, state and municipal work and of letting out by contract the labor of convicts, the securing for both sexes equal pay for equal work, the establishment of bureaus of labor statistics in the several states, and the inalienable inheritance and right to his share, for use, of the soil; and that the right to life carries with it the right to the means of living, and all statutes that obstruct or deny these rights are wrong, unjust, and must give way. Every member who has the right to vote is a part of the government of the United States and has a duty to perform, and the proper education necessary to intelligently exercise this right, free from corrupting influences, is another of the higher duties taught. In short, any action that will advance the cause of humanity, lighten the burden of toil, or elevate the moral and social condition of mankind, is the legitimate work of all Knights of Labor.

A. L. WHITESIDE.

The Police Gazette Case.

Yesterday Mr. W. Montross, the agent of the Police Gazette, was before Justice Tanner on the charge of distributing obscene literature. He waived examination and gave bond in the sum of $100 to answer any indictment that the grand jury at the fall term of Fulton superior court may find against him. Mr. Montross expresses himself as very confident that the copies of the Police Gazette distributed by him cannot be found obscene by the jury, and his plea will be that they do not fall under the inhibition of the state law.

Yesterday he received from Postmaster Conley a certificate that there had never been any ruling or order in the postoffice department against the Gazette and that it is delivered to subscribers as other papers are.

The law under which Mr. Montross was arrested was passed only a few years ago and soon after its passage Judge Hillyer and Solicitor-General Hill expressed the opinion that the Police Gazete came under the definition of obscene literature. Its sale was then stopped in Atlanta, but it has been sold regularly in other cities in the state all the while.

A Wonderful Portrait.

In the executive office of the capitol is on exhibition a truly wonderful portrait of Senator Brown. The picture has provoked enthusiastic approval and is pronounced by many the finest portrait seen in this city.

It is the work of Mr. L. M. D. Guillaume, a French artist of great renown, who lives in Washington and who came to Atlanta on special order from Senator Brown to paint portraits of the senator and his family. Mr. Guillaume is well known in Europe and in this country. Among his best known work in America is the great portrait of Commodore Maury in the galley at Washington, and the portrait of W. W. Corcoran, the great banker, at Washington University.

Mr. Guillaume is now the guest of Senator Brown and will be in the city for several days.

Dead.

The readers of THE CONSTITUTION will regret to hear of the death of Mr. William Sullivan Schley, in Cachuca, Mexico, August 1st.

Mr. Schley was well and favorably known in Georgia, endeared to many by his fine social qualities, and respected for his scientific attainments. He was educated in Germany, and his education was thorough. He was connected at one time with the geological department of this state, and was much esteemed for his attainments. At the time of the death of Mr. Schley, he was superintendent of some extensive silver mines in Mexico.

THE KIMBALL HOUSE.

SPECULATION AS TO THE REBUILDING OF THE HOUSE.

A Short Talk with Mr. H. I. Kimball in Regard to the Matter—Nothing Definite Yet Except that it Must be Rebuilt—Talks with Prominent Citizens on the Subject—Suggestions.

While THE CONSTITUTION has had very little to say for the past day or two in regard to the rebuilding of the Kimball house, the friends of the enterprise and the citizens generally have not been inactive. The arrival of Mr. H. I. Kimball in Atlanta with the announced purpose of reorganizing a company to rebuild the Kimball or a hotel that should be superior to it, has created some discussion. There are those in the city who believe that Mr. Kimball is not the best man to rebuild the hotel, and others who believe that he alone is the man that can and will push the work through. All agree that he is a man of great energy, sagacity and enterprise and that he will give his entire time to the work, and if the hotel is built under his management it must be first-class in every respect. The many buildings that he has erected in the city already bear evidence to that fact. His friends are rallying about him with old time enthusiasm, and many who have heretofore opposed him, think that he can be a very useful man at the present juncture. He has been exceedingly busy since his return consulting with parties at interest and talking generally on the subject. A CONSTITUTION man asked him on yesterday if he had anything to say as to the outlook. He replied:

"I have nothing to say because I know nothing at present that ought to be said. I have never seen any city more determined than Atlanta is that a large hotel should be promptly built. I have no doubt that the work can be accomplished promptly and in good shape."

"What ought a hotel equal to the Kimball house to cost?"

"A hotel with more rooms than the Kimball, with seven stories, finished in superior style can be built for three hundred thousand dollars. I have studied the matter very closely, have made estimates and compared them with the building of the old hotel. I am certain that three hundred thousand dollars will replace it with a better hotel than the one destroyed by fire last Sunday."

Mr. Kimball declined to say anything further upon the subject. He says that if he takes hold of the new hotel he will return to Atlanta and make it his home, bringing with him the interests in his charge at Chicago.

THE QUESTION OF THE LOCATION.

It may be said that the general opinion is that the location of the old Kimball is the best place for building the new hotel. There is a decided feeling, however, that the present owners of the property may value it at such a high figure that it will be impossible to raise the necessary money by subscription, and that a new location must be decided on. A gentleman of large means, who is deeply interested in the project, said on yesterday:

"I would not be willing to put my money in a hotel if the lot was held at at an exorbitant figure. In other words I am willing to put in $100 in gold against $100 in dirt, but I am not willing to put in a hundred dollars in gold against $50 worth of dirt. If the owners of that land will put it at a fair valuation I think it is perhaps the best location. If they will not, there are other places about as good."

A gentleman was asked what he thought the land was worth. He replied:

"Not one cent over a hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, and for this reason: It it is sold, it must be divided into lots. Now, there are eight lots on the Pryor street side that are 26x105, and two lots on the Decatur street side that are 26x103. The two lots to match these on the Wall street side belong to Messrs. Peters and King. Now, what are the eight lots on the Pryor street side worth per foot? When Governor Brown bought the Kiser corner just opposite, he paid four hundred dollars per foot, and the rest of the block sold at about three hundred dollars per foot. Indeed the whole front of the Republic block sold at about $310 per foot. This was when there was a big boom in real estate and several powerful and conflicting interests were bidding in the property. Furthermore, it was when the Kimball house was standing just opposite and enhancing the value of the lots very materially. Now, I don't think that anybody will claim that the lots on which the Kimball house stood are worth more than $100 per foot more than the Republic block lots were worth when they were sold, especially when the Kimball house, that gave them much of their value, has now been destroyed. But, say that they are worth $500 per foot and would bring that sum, which is $200 per foot more than lots just across the street sold for. That would be $500 a front foot or $13,000 a lot or $104,000 for the Pryor street side. Now put the Decatur street side at the same price, and no one will say that they are worth as much. That would be $26,000, say $130,000 for the property. I don't believe that any man will hold that the lots would bring $500 per front foot all the way through, especially when it sold in that way the great hotel of the city would certainly be built elsewhere. It is my opinion that the property is worth more for a hotel than for any other purpose and that it is worth but $110,000 as a site for a hotel. I believe that the owners will sell at a reasonable figure and I don't believe there will be any trouble in getting the land when the money is raised to build the hotel, or getting an option whenever it is formally asked for."

Mr. Kimball paid $2,000 for the land on which the Kimball stood, or say $92,000 before the Peters and King lots were deducted. A gentleman, who is in position to know the opinions of at least three stockholders in the land, said,

"I say to you and you may say to the public that there will be no difficulty in making terms for either the purchase or the lease of the land on which the Kimball house stood for the rebuilding of a hotel of similar style and size. I believe that the owners, without exception, would submit the whole matter to the arbitration of three good citizens. I have heard that they value the land at $250,000. That is altogether a mistake. They have not set, definitely, any value on the land, but I have never heard a guess from one of them that approached $200,000 by a considerable figure."

OTHER LOCATIONS THAT ARE AVAILABLE.

There was a considerable sentiment yesterday on Broad street in favor of buying the block on the corner of Broad and Alabama, in which the livery stable is located. Mr. Hugh Inman owns the Broad street corner and the Forsyth street corner. Mr. Walker Inman owns elsewhere in the block, and Captain English owns the stable and several other buildings. It is understood that a space 180x220 can be bought for about $130,000. It is counted by those who favor this site that it is high, airy and accessible," that it stands about the center of the city, is convenient to the courthouse, theatre and the great shopping street, to the great wholesale street and to the depot. Touching its distance from the union passenger depot, a gentleman said:

"We must not consider the Union passenger depot as permanently established. It is foolish to believe that the Central, the State road, and the Georgia road, that are now well fixed in the old depot, will give up their present quarters and move elsewhere in the city, in order to accommodate the roads that are run in rivalry to them. You may rest assured that the present Union passenger depot will remain where it is and that the trains of the State road, the Georgia road and the Central road will continue to load and unload there. The East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia, and the Georgia Pacific are shut out and now use a temporary depot. As a matter of course, they will build a handsome passenger depot elsewhere in the city. As the East Tennessee people have obtained control of the Richmond and Danville system, they may consolidate the Air-Line depot and the Georgia Pacific depot with theirs, so that the passenger business will be divided between the two depots, and the hotel built on the corner of Broad and Alabama will be between the two."

There is a sentiment in favor of buying the Broad and Walton property, which can be had, it is said, at very reasonable figures. It is understood that Mr. Wash Collier and some of his neighbors would sell the land they own at the corner of Peachtree and Ellis, and that location has its friends. Applications have also been made to Mr. John Inman for the terms upon which he would sell his lot on Mitchell street on which the old Peters residence is placed. There is considerable discussion as to these various sites, and no very definite sentiment has been reached other than that if the owners of the present land will sell on reasonable terms it is perhaps best to put the new hotel there.

THE QUESTION OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

There seems to be little doubt that the amount of money necessary will be raised in Atlanta, whenever the preliminaries are all cleared away and the work begun. While no one is disposed to promise very large subscriptions it is almost impossible to find one man who will not subscribe something. Messrs Scoville and Beermann still say that they will take $25,000 stock in the new enterprise. Mr. W. B. Lowe said on yesterday:

"I have just said to Mr. Kimball that I will take from three to five thousand dollars stock in a hotel if the subscription list is passed around."

Several thousand dollar subscriptions have been promised already, and when the paper is once opened and circulated the people of Atlanta will show that they intend to keep up with their past record.

A CARD.

ATLANTA, GA., May 12, 1882.

DR. H. MOZLEY:—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from Indigestion or Dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and biliousness, disordered kidneys and constipation, during which time I used all known remedies, and at great expense, exhausted the skill of many eminent physicians, and continued to grow worse, I have been cured by your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man. The Lemon Elixir at the same time permanently relieved me of a most severe case of Piles of many years' standing.

DRY TETTER CURED.

The Evidence of a Louisville Man on an Important Subject.

From The Louisville Post, August 11th, 1883.

Mr. James Dunning, formerly of Atlanta, but now of Louisville, and well known in Nashville and St. Louis, as he has lived in both places, testifies as follows regarding a remarkable cure of dry tetter, by Swift's Specific: "For years I was afflicted with a most stubborn case of dry tetter. I consulted all of the best physicians, used arsenic externally, and mercury and all the strong mineral remedies prescribed by physicians internally, without any beneficial results. The desperate and heroic treatment did me harm instead of good. The dry tetter continued to grow worse, my skin peeled off, the itching almost ran me crazy. The mercury and other mineral substances prescribed stiffened my joints and made my bones ache, especially in damp or wet weather. After years of treatment by the best physicians, I found my blood poisoned, my bones aching, my joints stiff, my general health impaired, and the tetter no better; my hands, especially, were so stiffened and full of pain that I was unfit for work. The disease had been to me a source of great mortification and extreme annoyance, but the medicine, without curing the disease, had wrought what seemed to be irreparable injuries. At last I concluded to try Swift's Specific, not that I had any faith in its curing such a desperate case as mine, but because all of my friends recommended it, and I saw it was indorsed by the very best men in Georgia. The result was unexpected and very gratifying. In a few months I was completely well of the dry tetter, and I was rid of all the bad effects of the mercury, arsenic and other poisons that the doctors had prescribed for me. The stiffness has left my joints, my bones have ceased to ache and my general health has in every way improved. I passed last winter in Louisville, which is noted for the dampness of its temperature, without a touch of rheumatism or stiffness in my bones. My cure is due solely to Swift's Specific, and I take pleasure in giving it this endorsement that those likewise afflicted may profit by my experience. I can be found at any time at 524 Jefferson street, and will take pleasure in talking or corresponding with any one interested.

To The Public.

From The Nashville American, August 11th, 1883.

Mr. Chas. Newman, proprietor of the Senate saloon, one of the most popular and best known men in Nashville, gives some interesting evidence regarding a remarkable cure of a kidney complaint, which was the outgrowth of malarial poison. He says: "Years ago my whole system was poisoned through malaria; my blood became impure, and at last it settled on my kidneys, causing me great inconvenience and giving me a great deal of pain. I tried everything to root out the germs of malaria from my system and blood. I tried all of the best physicians; took every patent medicine I saw advertised; went to the Hot Springs twice; all without avail; nothing did me any good, and I continued to grow worse and suffer more. At last a wholesale druggist friend of mine persuaded me to try Swift's Specific. After taking the first bottle I commenced growing better, and in six months a well man. Since then I have had no return of the kidney trouble, and have improved in health and spirits ever since I first commenced taking the three S's. My system is now as free from malaria as any man's. I believe the three S's is the best medicine ever made for malarial poison; works better on the kidneys; is the best blood purifier known; is incomparable as a health tonic. I can be found any time at the Senate saloon and will take pleasure in talking or corresponding with anyone afflicted with a kidney complaint or malarial poison."

TOOK FORTY GRAINS OPIUM IN ONE DAY.

SIXTY-FOUR YEARS OLD.

Forty Years Afflicted With Kidney and Liver Disease, and Nine Years in Opium Bondage Cured Painlessly—Read What he Says.

TYLER, TEXAS, May 26, 1883.

DEAR SIR:—I deem it my duty to you and the suffering OPIUM AFFLICTED to state that I am a perfectly CURED man by the use of your most valuable Opium Antidote. I was bound by the Opium Tyrant for nine years, taking at the time I commenced your treatment forty grains in twenty-four hours. I tried every way I could think of to quit it, but failed. I had about given up the idea of ever being cured, but I thank God I learned you could cure, which I doubted until I commenced the use of your medicine. I am now nearly sixty-four years old and have been afflicted for forty years with Kidney and Liver disease. I was recommended to take Opium to deaden the pain.

I commenced to take your Antidote on the 18th day of October, 1882, and left it off the 16th day of March, 1883, a PERFECTLY CURED man. I will say that from the very first day I began your Antidote I had no desire for opium and have never had any, and as soon as the Antidote had performed its work I could not take it any longer, and no one need have any fear of trouble in leaving off the Antidote. It is not a substitute, but I have found it to be a PERFECT CURE. Any person desiring further information in regard to my case can address me at Tyler, Smith county, Texas, and I will cheerfully answer all questions. I am now an old man and this is my first time to appear in public print in behalf of any man or remedy, and I do so now to give my feeble testimony in behalf of your valuable remedy.

I will add that from the very first commencement I slept soundly at night and enjoyed my meals with a relish.

Yours Very Truly,
DAVID L. DARK.

POINTS

About the new improved Atlanta Watch.

1

The best mechanical construction, embodying principles that will produce the most accurate time, with the smallest amount of friction, and securing a Watch that will run from 36 to 45 hours instead of 30 to 32.

2

Substantial in all its parts, so that it will stand the roughest usage; particularly adapted for railroad and all other purposes where utmost accuracy is necessary and hardest wear is given.

3

The best protected against dust and cinders of railroad trains, having around each movement a special dust-excluding band for that purpose.

4

It has new improvements that can only be found upon our watch, and in this particular as much superior to the old style watch as the breech-loading gun is more desirable than the old "flint and steel."

5

By the use of our new Patent Regulator the watch can be quickly and accurately regulated, and by the means of which we have secured such remarkable results in time-keeping, as certified to by 350 names which we have on file.

6

The Factory being here at home, should an accident occur to any part, a duplicate of that part can be supplied immediately and the watch put running again in thirty minutes.

7

Every watch is fully guaranteed by a responsible home establishment, and the prices are very low for first-class time-pieces.

Call and examine, or send for our descriptive Catalogue.

WALLACE RHODES.

Land Ahead.

To the brethren and friends of the Third Baptist church:

Our new building has risen steadily from the foundation upward, and we are greatly encouraged in our work. We have made it a rule to pay as we go, and from this rule we have not parted. It is believed by the building committee that twelve hundred dollars will put us into the basement, and then we will feel secure. We cannot possibly remain in our present quarters through the winter, and so we are exceeding anxious to get under the cover of our new house.

Will not our brethren and friends come to our aid at once, and put the enterprise through? In the name of the dear Jesus we plead for help. Any amount sent to me or handed to John H. James, the banker, will be thankfully received and properly applied.

H. C. HORNADY,
Pastor and Ch. Building Committee.

The mere announcement in last Sunday's CONSTITUTION that Mr. Joseph H. Shadfield, of the popular restaurant 13th street and Penn avenue, Washington city, would assume entire control and management of Saul's ladies' restaurant, September 1st, has caused a commotion in fair circles. Every lady and gentleman who ever visited the capitol city has partaken more or less of, Mr. Shadfield's delicacies and his national reputation being so great, our citizens generally are on the "qui vive," anticipating what a pleasure 'twill be to visit Saul's "Royal palais" and enjoy, away from the noise and dirt of the streets a half hour of pleasant recreation and partake of such delicacies as can't be surpassed at Delmonico's or any other place north, east or west. Saul's palais will now be more popular than ever, and why should not it be when he spares no money or expense in arranging for the comforts of his guests.

Now is the time to buy your blankets, underwear, winter dresses for school girls, flannels, rubbers, ulsters and anything else you need this fall and winter, and don't forget, the place is 72 Whitehall street.

WALLACE RHODES.

T. A. Frierson, Real Estate and Renting Agent.

Office No. 36 Wall street. My office is now located at No. 36 Wall street, (Brown's block) where I will be pleased to see my friends and transact any business in my line. The burning of my office in the Kimball house will not interfere with the order of my business. I still have an attractive rent list, embracing dwellings from 2 to 12 rooms; also a variety of city property and farms for sale, to all of which I invite the attention of the public.

Very respectfully, T. A. FRIERSON.

Professor Holland's dancing academy closes September 1st. Will reopen October 1st., at Centennial hall. Soiree next Friday night 9 p. m., accompanied by Wurm's orchestra.

We desire to call the readers attention to the business card published elsewhere in our columns.

Perhaps there is no professional man in the city of Atlanta who will not feel that a thoroughly organized and well equipped office of general shorthand and law reporters will inure to his benefit. "Daily copy" is something of an innovation in the city and we are glad to welcome the enterprise.

HIGH'S

Will continue our Great Cost Sale for two weeks more. Every possible sale must be made; absolutely nothing but genuine bargains offered. HIGH'S.

SOCIAL GOSSIP.

THE WEEK AND ITS ENTERTAINMENTS.

The People Here and Elsewhere—The Marriage Season in Full Blast—Social Clubs and Reunions. Rumors of Stage and Footlight Happiness—Fashion Notes—Women's Ways.

A Pleasant Party.

Thursday night a complimentary dance was given at the residence of Dr. E. J. Roach on Whitehall street, to Miss Dixie Harris, of Cuthbert, Ga., who by her many graces and beauty has made numerous admirers in Atlanta. The handsome parlors were brilliantly lighted and the scene which was presented was one of rare beauty and loveliness. Those present will long cherish it as one of the most pleasant social events of the season. Among the ladies present were Mrs James Bridge, Mrs. Dr. E. W. Roach, Mrs. Thomaston, Misses Dixie Harris, May Earl Roach, Pet Nesbitt, Hattie Wharton, Maggie Barry, Carrie Towles, Ella Powell, Estelle Bostick, Fannie Brown, Emma Tuller. Among the gentlemen were Governor McDaniel, Dr. E. J. Roach, Dr. E. W. Roach, Colonel Bray, E. P. Chamberlin, Joseph M. Brown, Dee McCarty, Dr. Frank Holland, E. A. Brown, E. C. Spalding, Charles Tuller, Leonard Brown, W. T. Spalding, Dr. Nath Harris, George W. Sims, Benj. Willingham, Bob Raines, John Moore, D. W. Rountree, E. P. McBurney, Egbert A. McDaniel.

Complimentary Hop.

The hop complimentary to Miss Dixie Harris, of Cuthbert, at the residence of Dr. E. J. Roach, Whitehall street, Thursday evening, was in every respect a most enjoyable and charming an affair. All who received the beautiful invitations, with the programme of fourteen dances, anticipated a delightful evening, and this hope blossomed into beautiful fulfillment, as the guests entered Dr. Roach's residence Thursday—

"And gas and beauty's blended rays
Set hearts and parlor's in a blaze."

During the summer there has been no entertainment of a similar character, that furnished a greater amount of pleasure. Sparkling conversation, graceful dancing, delicious music, caused several hours to simply pass by, and with but one regret—the time for "good night," came too soon.

Among the guests were Miss Roach, blue satin and diamonds; Miss Dixie Harris, gas, light blue, brocaded silk point lace, and pearls; Mrs James Bridge, cream silk point lace and diamonds; Miss Maggie Barry, white satin, Spanish lace oversuit, bead trimming and diamonds; Miss Nesbit, of Macon, heliotrope silk, white oversuit and pearls; Miss Stella Bostwick, cream satin and nun's veiling; Miss Hattie Wharton, blue satin and white mull; Miss Emma Tuller, lavender satin and white mull; Miss Carrie Fowler, blue nun's veiling; Miss Ella Powell, white creip and Spanish lace; Miss Fannie Brown, lavender nun's veiling; Mrs. Thomason, of Montgomery, cream nun's veiling. Among the gentlemen present were Governor McDaniel, Dr. Ed Roach, D. McCarty, John S. Parks, C. D. Fuller, Dr. John Lawshe, Egbert McDaniel, Dr. N. O. Harris, Bob Raines, John Moore, Joseph E. Brown, Jr., Will Spalding, Geo. Sims, Benj. Willingham, Elijah Brown.

MATRIMONIAL.

BROWN—MILNER.

One of the happiest social events of the season was the marriage of Mr. James E. Brown, of McDonough, and Miss Kate E. Milner, of Newnan, which occurred in the latter city on Thursday evening last The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. Robert Milner, and was witnessed by quite a large company, composed of the relatives and friends of the contracting parties. In addition to a numerous array of local beauty and gallantry, the following guests from a distance were also present: Messrs. G. H. Tanner, John L. Tye, H. H. Griffin, C. A. Niles, Atlanta; J. M. Williams, J. A. Fouche, C. D. McDonald, H. N. McDonald, J. L. Wise, Alex. Lemon, J. M. Johnson, McDonough; W. A. North, J. T. Manley, J. T. Benford, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Henderson. Mrs. W. H. Peebles, Hampton; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Addy, Senoia; Mrs. James Lark Leary, A. C. Blalock, Jonesboro; L. T. Blalock, Fayetteville. The bridal presents were numerous and handsome. The happy young couple start upon the voyage of life under the happiest auspices, and THE CONSTITUTION unites with their large circle of friends in wishing them long, happy and useful lives.

BOYNTON—HALL.

Thursday night (16th) in this city, at the residence of the bride's father, corner Washington and Richardson streets, Mr. J. L. Boynton, son of ex-Governor Boynton, was married to Miss Mamie F. Hall, Rev. Dr. Hornady officiating. The happy couple have gone to the Louisville exposition, and from there will go to Texas, their future home.

PHILLIPS—M'GEHEE.

Married at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. A. M. Winn, 402 Decatur street, Mr. T. Phillips to Miss Annie McGehee, both of this city, Rev. G. B. Strickler, of the Central Presbyterian church, officiating. The marriage was private. After the ceremony, the newly married pair left for Oxford, Ala., their future home.

BERRY—ANDERSON.

Married at the residence of the father of the bride, Mr. W. P. Anderson, in Woodstock, Mr. C. S. Berry, of Athens, and Miss Annie Anderson, Rev. W. L. Wooten officiating. No cards.

Mr. James Jarrall, of Milledgeville, carries a pocket knife, which was given to him in 1829.

Professor V. T. Barnwell, of Atlanta, held "a service of song," in Newnan during the past week.

There are two widows in Atlanta, rumor says, who will seek the renewed sunshine of matrimony, this fall.

Covington Star: "Report has it that a Social Circle young man is engaged to a young lady in Atlanta."

Covington Enterprise: Atlanta entertained members of the Agricultural society in the best of style this week.

Louisville, Ky., Commercial: The Southern agricultural works, Atlanta, Ga., have a grand display of their manufactures.

Oglethrope Echo: Crawford grows brighter when we think of how soon Judge F. G. Platt, of Atlanta, will make it his home again.

Owensboro Messenger: Lieutenant Ira Haynes left Wednesday for Louisville and Cumberland Falls, and will go thence to his post at Atlanta.

Miss Chamberlan, "the Prince of Wales's American beauty," has had a dress style named after her by one of the Paris man-milliners. It is white and silver.

Beautiful frosted windows with raised designs of all kinds and lines imitating the lead partitions are very much admired, especially for dressing rooms or boudoirs.

The Chatham county bar have united in a letter to Judge Erskine, who is at Saratoga, requesting him to defer his resignation as judge of the United States court.

Augusta Evening News: "The rumor of the marriage of two of the loveliest ladies of Athens in October, is already circulated. Atlanta and Augusta will win these fair and classic gems.

Large numbers of little children go daily to Ponce de Leon spring. Looking at them playing and happy out there, who can wonder that Raphael found his ideal seraphs among the ranks of happy children sporting along the grassy avenues of imperial Rome.

An Atlanta married lady, accomplished in all household matters, a popular writer of prose and poetry, has just completed a pocket handkerchief which is an exquisite piece of workmanship.

Valdosta Times: The ever genial Ed Johnson, of THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, was in the city one day this week. We were pleased to see him looking so well, and to learn the great daily he represents is still booming. May it always be thus.

Louisville, Ky., Commercial: A company of students from the university of Georgia, consisting of R. H. Johnson, Atlanta; D. Freeman, Savannah; J. D. Mell, Athens, and A. J. Smith, of Oxford, Miss., are registered at the Louisville hotel.

Soon now juvenile curiosity will be stimulated by pictoral representations of Sell's Brothers circus and menagerie. The elephants swinging their cartilacious shillalahs; wagons bearing the savage animals in vans all mystery and red panels, piebald horses, ponies, etc.

Many of our citizens have returned from the resorts, and on the streets can be seen parties that have been absent since first—

"The fervid summer noon
Kissed the ripe lips of rosy June."

The legislature of Georgia has adopted a line or two from Blake's drama, "Ormusel's Triumph: or the Fall of Ahriman:"

"Hence I
To temperance will devote myself. This day
Its friends do celebrate their triumphs, I'll
To them and give my turn for a bonfire."

The verse below does not apply to every Atlanta husband whose wife is off at any of the resorts. O, no!

"Of all the insiduous
Temptations invidious,
Contrived by the devil for pulling men down,
There's none more delusive,
Sedusive, abusive,
Than the snare of a man with a wife out of town."

Athens Banner Watchman: "There are many other places of equal prominence and interest in Clarksville, that we regret our space will not permit us to describe. We saw the tasty home of General Toombs. Together with his amiable lady this grand old statesman leads a retired summer life here, seldom appearing in public. He does not seek company, and no one feels authorized to force themselves upon him. We are told that Mrs. Toombs says the happiest days of her life have been spent in Clarksville, and she regrets when the time for her removal arrives."

From "At Home," St. Paul, Minn: "One of the best and most successful parties that ever visited that famous trout stream, the Nipegon river, returned this week. It consisted of Bispop Beckwith of Georgia, Bishop Whipple, Rev. Mr. Gilbert, Judge Wilder, and Messrs, B. T. Fairchild, W. Dawson, R. Warner, C. J. Mahler, and D. D. Lambie, the latter acting as commissary. They were absent about two weeks and caught perhaps a ton of trout. Bishop Beckwith proved the champion of the party, catching a trout that weighed 6½ pounds and measured 23 inches in length and 15 round. He also caught with an 8 ounce bamboo rod an 18 pound lake trout that fought twenty-five minutes. It was 37½ inches long. Mr. Fairchild landed a brook trout weighing 6 pounds, which was 26 inches long. They brought back a splendid lot of prizes."

Cincinnati Commercial: Women comprehend men's infatuation for beautiful women, and sometimes forgive it, but never admit the power of fascination possessed by the ugly ones, and yet the ugly ones sometimes have their pick of the prizes. Men and women who have seen much of the world know that there is a certain indefinable power called fascination, which is something much higher than beauty. Does anybody know whether it can be cultivated? It is probably a fairy's gift at baptism. but when it is added to beauty the Helens of Troy appear on the scene, and he who sees is conquered. This also explains why there are beauties, and why some fair women fail to charm as one feels they ought. And it is a comfortable doctrine for both the girl who would like to be prettier and the one whose looking-glass satisfies her, because the one may hope for it as a potent spell and the other take it as an added grace; and so may heaven endow them both.

RESORT ITEMS.

The Misses Hamilton, of Athens, are at Tallulah falls.

Both hotels are crowded with visitors at Powder Springs.

Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Johnson, of Atlanta, have gone to Mt. Airy.

Mr. Webster Davis, of Atlanta, is enjoying himself at Cape May.

Mr. E. G. Oates and wife, of Knoxville, Tenn., are at Mt. Airy.

There are about 560 guests at the Warm springs of North Carolina.

In comparison with former seasons, Saratoga is very dull and quiet.

The Red Sulphur springs, Va., has about 200 visitors, and is doing well.

There are four hundred and fifty visitors at Alleghany springs, Virginia.

Mr. B. A. Denmark and family, of Savannah, are at White Sulphur springs.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Tift, and Miss Annie Ranson, of Albany, are at Mt. Airy.

Miss Katie Silvey, of Atlanta, will remain at Tallulah, until the middle of September.

Captain G. R. Boaz and family, of Atlanta, are spending the summer at Tate springs.

There are more visitors at Shelby springs, Ala., this season than for several years past.

Miss Rosa Haiman and Mr. John Banton, of Atlanta, are guests at Natural bridge springs.

Miss Bessie Willingham has returned from Tallulah falls, and is stopping at Mrs. Eddleman's.

Judge A. C. Pate and daughters, of Hawkinsville, are at the Arlington, Gainesville, for the summer.

Mrs. Julia Forsyth and her daughter, Miss Margaret, are at Chalybeate springs, Meriwether county, Ga.

There are now at Porter springs about seventy-five guests, and they are kindly cared for, and looked after.

Miss Annie Leonard, of Eatonton, is a guest at Tallulah falls. There are some two hundred and fifty people there.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J Morton and family, George D. Thomas and bride and Miss Bonnell, of Athens, are at Tallulah falls.

Miss Fannie Everett, of Atlanta, is regarded as one of the best dancers at Tallulah by the Athens Banner-Watchman.

Mrs. J. R. Gates and her daughter, Miss Orlean Gates, of Mobile, are at New Holland springs for the remainder of the summer.

Miss Susie Wallace, of Chattanooga, with her grandfather, Major Campbell Wallace, of Atlanta, are at Rhea springs, Tenn.

The Athens Banner-Watchman says: "Miss Kate Silvey, of Atlanta, wins her way to all hearts by her quiet manners and winning ways."

Augusta Evening News: Miss Maude Talmage, one of the beautiful belles of Athens, was much admired in Tallulah by the beaux of Athens and Atlanta.

Hall county White Sulphur springs has had about as many guests as they can care for, ever since the season opened. They are among the best people of the south.

The most elegantly and elaborately dressed ladies at the summer resorts this year are Jewesses. Their diamonds alone represent about two hundred national banks.

Mr. S. J. Kennerly, of Palatka, Florida, is spending sometime in the mountains of north Georgia. He will make Atlanta his headquarters. His family accompany him.

A lady at one of the Long Branch hotels has already exhibited forty different costumes and has two maids employed making new gowns for her, which she puts on as fast as completed.

The young ladies outnumber the gentleman at many of the resorts this season. They are "wasting their sweetness on the desert air;" or like Gray's modest sisters they "blush unseen," as they sing the line from the ballad of Crazy Jane—"There's not a man to meet us here."

Tallulah personals in Athens Banner-Watchman: Mrs Camp, a most charming lady of Atlanta, continues to make many friends by her amiable manners and sweet disposition. Mrs. Captain Clanton, of Columbia, has won many friends here by her charming manner and fine conversational powers. She leaves Monday for Atlanta. Mrs Frank and her daughter, Mrs. Burke, of Atlanta, are spending a delightful visit at Talullah hotel. Lieutenant Harrell, of Atlanta, a gallant soldier and most estimable gentleman, is spending a few days at Moss' hotel.

Richmond, Va., State says: Mr. Guerard, of Georgia, gave a charming lawn party Thursday, chaperoned by Mrs. Lewis Webb, of Richmond. Miss Venable, of Petersburg; Mr. Boykin, of the same city; Mr. Wright, of Augusta, Ga.; Miss Miriam Branch, of Richmond; Miss LaMar, of Georgia; Mr. Warwick, of Richmond; Miss Bruce, of Virginia; Mr. Dale Stuart, of Virginia; the Misses Johnson, Georgia; Mr. Sparks and Mr. J. L. Stern, composed the party. Georgia men do not seem to care about dress, though they are very popular and have a certain dash and brilliancy of manner and conversation which is quite inspiring, and yet this is the faithful reproduction of the costume of one of society's favorites. He wore for morning a very long Prince Albert, a very low black broadcloth vest, a standing collar and a sash—I cannot treat it with so little reverence as to call it a tie—of light blue ribbon about his neck. His accommodating tailor had taken two seams in his light gray trousers (a tribute to the prevailing style) and on his head rested a wide, soft, grey felt hat, which looked as through it and its wearer would like a feather in it."

Correspondent at Virginia White Sulphur springs writing to Philadelphia Times, says: "Misses Johnson, of Macon, Georgia, and Mrs. Bruce, of Virginia, are among those whose germans are looked forward to with great pleasure by the young people. A swell breakfast will be given by Miss Barrett, of Augusta, Georgia. These are all in addition to the semi-weekly germans and the morning gemans given by the managers of the White. The oldest habitue concedes that never before have there been so many beautiful women at the "Old White." Where there are so many who are belles it is difficult to particularize. Miss Pryor, of New York, daughter of Roger A. Pryor; Miss Richardson, of New Orleans; Miss Kate Thompson, of Memphis; Miss Maggie Barrett, of Georgia; Miss Virginia Cabell, of Richmond; Miss Page Aylett, of Richmond, and Miss Lettie Robinson, of Louisville, Ky., are the reigning belles of the ball room. The Misses Sneed, of Memphis; Miss Morehead, of North Carolina; Miss Sharp, of Brooklyn; the Misses Whitney, of New York; Misses Pork, Bruce and Venable, of Virginia; Misses Johnson and Hall, of Georgia; Miss Moss, of New York, are all great favorites."

A DELIGHTFUL RESORT.

Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs—The Belles and Beaux.

Special to The Constitution.

GREENBRIER WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, August 17.—Society Editor Constitution: The old White is abaze with beauty and fashion. This and the next ten days constitute the heighth of the season. Nearly every important city in the country has contributed a portion of its choicest and most fashionable society. All the way from the Crescent city in the far south to the great metropolis of the north this famous resort has gathered in all the beautiful belles and gallant beaux, until now it can be truthfully said that no other watering place in the country, north, south, east or west, can boast of so many beautiful ladies and handsome, chivalric gentlemen. As was said by a recent correspondent, it is the great "Mecca" of southern belles and beaux. Always popular in the past it could not help being doubly so now, since the phenomenal improvement in the place.

The six hundred acres of closely shaven green and noble shades have, under the new regime, received the touch of the artist's hand, and everywhere the lines and curves which mark the boundaries of lovely squares of green and beautiful borders of flowers chase and cross each other and lose themselves in a hopeless entanglement of natural beauty—in the centre of this mountain encircled plat of natural and artistic loveliness is situated the grand hotel, and all around like so many separate homes the cottages in beautiful disorder peep out from the edges of the woodland or standguard in orderly lines leading to and from the great "castle" in the centre.

With this faint attempt at giving the outer appointments of the place, let me have a word to say of the people who are here. Of course where there are at least 1,800 guests it would be a hopeless task to mention many names. It is conceded on all hands that there never were so many beautiful women here before. The Misses Alexander, Hall, Johnson and Barrett, of Georgia; Miss Lettie Robinson, of Louisville, Kentucky; Misses Sneed and Thompson, of Memphis; Misses Virginia Cabell and Page, Aylett and Misses Cullen of Richmond, Miss Richardson of New Orleans, are the reigning belles at this time, Miss Pryor, of New York, daughter of Roger A. Pryor; Miss Stephenson, of Kentucky, daughter of Governor Stephenson; Misses Whitney, Sharp, of New York; Misses Carter, Bruce, Pork, Venable, of Virginia; Misses King, Le Pere and Kernagham, of New Orleans; are among the most popular and beatiful ladies here.

Miss Richardson, of New Orleans, the daughter of the great planting prince and millionaire, is a queenly blonde of striking personage, with a beautiful face and graceful figure. She is much admired.

Miss Bessie Alexander, of Georgia, arrived only three days ago, but she had hardly entered the great parlors the first evening of her arrival before she was the observed of all observers, as she promenaded the "tread-mill" with six escorts surrounding her. This explains how at once she sprang to the front rank of belles. It must be remembered that one escort is more than an average for each lady here. Her face is as beautiful as a dream.

Miss Lula Alexander, the beautiful and accomplished sister, is no less popular and her cultured mind furnishes as much pleasure to one class of her admirers as her grace in the ball room add to the happiness of another class.

I can not better describe Miss Maggie Barrett, of Augusta, than by quoting from the correspondent of the Charleston News and Courier: "Miss Barrett, a tall, shapely, aristocratic and queenly beauty with conspicuously blue eyes, rich complexion and very dark hair, is thought by many to be the handsomest lady at the springs."

Miss Lettie Robinson, of Louisville, is the center of admiring groups of men wherever she is. I never knew a woman more gifted in the power of entertaining. She is as popular in manner as lovely in person.

Miss Hall, of Macon, Ga., is considered by every one as the most brilliant wit of the spring. She is a great favorite on the lawn as well as in the ball room.

Miss Page Aylett, of Richmond, is a brilliant beauty. She is the pride of the Richmond people.

Miss Nellie Lottier, another beautiful daughter of Richmond, has just arrived and commeneed her career at the White last evening with marked distinction.

The Misses Johnson, of Macon, come in for a full share of admiration. I hear they are to give a swell private german this week.

But I must desist. There are many notables here President Arthur and Senator Bayard were here a short while some days ago. Governors, senators, congressmen and exs of each class were numerous but there is not space left for them. Among the Georgians here we notice, in addition to those already mentioned, General and Mrs. A. R. Lawton, General E. P. Alexander and family, Mr. Johnson and family, of Macon, Mr. Smith and family, of Macon, Mrs. Lamar and Miss Lamar, the Chisolms and Guerrards, of Savannah, Mrs. T. G. Barrett and daughter, Ker Boyce, Wallace I. Delph, Boykin Wright, of Augusta, Messrs. Sparks, Baxter and Felton, of Macon; Dr. Deadwyler and wife, of Elberton. There are others, but their names do not now occur to me. General A. R. Lawton, who is the president of the American Bar association, leaves in a day or two for Saratoga, where the annual meeting of that body is held this year. Governor Stephenson, of Kentucky, who will deliver the oration, will accompany him from this place

The largest private german of the season came off this morning—given by Mrs. Bruce, of Virginia, to her beautiful daughters.

Among several other private entertainments mentioned for the week we hear Miss Barrett, of Augusta, will give a swell breakfast.

The Misses Stuart, of Virginia, will give a large supper after the evening German one night this week. There are several others spoken of, but I have not learned the dates.

These, of course, are in addition to the nightly balls and tri-weekly germans—morning and evening—given by the managers of the springs.

The weather is very cool, fires and overcoats being enjoyed by all, evenings and mornings.

GOSSIP FROM NEW HOLLAND.

Its Surroundings—Music—Dashing Teams—Children, and its Guests.

NEW HOLLAND SPRINGS, August 14.—Society Editor Constitution: They say over at White Sulphur that they are more toney than we of New Holland are. I believe they look upon us as a very mixed company. Well, they may be aristocratic and exclusive but we have all the fun.

Of all Georgia watering places give me New Holland when it is well-kept—which it certainly is this season. Colonel Huff never does things by halves. Look at the beautiful park in Macon, and you will have some idea of the taste and liberal ideas of the man who stands at the head of New Holland springs.

Stepping off the 5:30 train from Atlanta a few days ago, I stood under a fanciful little depot filled with gaily dressed ladies and children, I saw fine teams dashing around, I heard the sound of music in the distance; I caught glimpses of smooth lawns, artistic walks, and well kept grounds. Such is the sight that greets the new comers eye—and it grows better as he draws nearer. New Holland is central and accessible. With all its cool, healthy mountain air, you are within a few hours ride of Atlanta and almost in walking distance of Gainesville. We have accommodation trains, regular trains, hacks and omnibuses passing almost every hour of the day and night. So we are not lonesome at New Holland. The company is constantly changing but not diminishing in numbers. We have two hundred to two hundred and fifty guests, all comfortably quartered, well fed, and well waited on.

Among distinguished and well known Georgians, we have Colonel Willis Hawkins, of Americus, and his three daughters. Hon. Emory Speer and wife. I have not sounded Mr. Speer politically or financially, but physically he is solid. Mrs. Speer appears to be a lady of fine character.

Mrs. Larendon, a daughter of General Beauregard, arrived yesterday, accompanied by her husband.

Among many others I will mention Judge Hammond, of Atlanta, and his charming wife, Captain J. F. Burke and Mrs. Burke.

J. J. Clay, of Macon, Ga., with his wife and daughter. Mrs. Clay's name, at least, is known throughout Georgia.

Last night I witnessed the pretty sight of father and daughter dancing together.

Miss Sally, daughter of Governor Brown, is here with the family of Hon. Julius L. Brown.

Major Ben Crane's family is here, and though a very small family, it fills a very large place in our estimation.

Captain and Mrs. Keely are here, and Mrs. Keely is a remarkably fine equestrienne.

Ed Hack, of Augusta, owns the finest turnout on the ground.

Mrs. Adkins, of Cuthbert, is said to be the finest talker.

H. W. G. says that all the women with a tendency to embonpoint (only he did not put it so delicately) went to Cape May this summer, but he is mistaken. He should come to New Holland. The most beautiful face I have ever seen belongs to one of these daughters of Hebe, and she comes from the "land of flowers." Miss Clifford Putnam of Atlanta. Miss Daisy Huff of Macon, and Miss Bessie Godby of Waynesboro, are among the reigning belles. Mrs. Farley of Savannah, formerly Miss Ella Kimbro of Atlanta, is among our most charming married ladies. She wears also the handsomest diamonds. Mr. H. L. Porter, manager of the springs, and his accomplished wife, add greatly to the pleasure of their company with their music. Mrs. Porter is an uncommonly fine pianist.

DRAMATIC ITEMS.

Henry Irving is to make his first appearance in America as Mathas in "The Bells."

Signor Tagliaprietra will sing in the Emma Abbott opera company the coming season.

Miss Katie Putnam has a new play entitled "Ted, or only a Woman," the author of T. C. DeLeon, of Mobile.

The London people have fallen down to worship Mary Anderson, and the Court Journal goes into raptures over her beauty.

It is said that the United States have paid about $20,000,000 for the last thirty-four years, since Jenny Lind's time, for musical artists.

Mesdames Aimee and Angele will inaugurate the French opera bouffe company's performances at the Fifth avenue theater, September 10.

Miss Emma Elsner, of the Ress opera company, has made her debut on the German stage at Schlitz park summer theater, Milwaukee, as Fiametta in Boccacio. The house was well filled, and Miss Elsner was the recipient of several very handsome floral offerings.

Mlle. Aimee, Mlle. Angele and Mr. Maurice Grau's complete French opera company will sail from Havre August 18, on the French steamer Normandie. The New York season will open on Monday, September 10, in the Fifth avenue theatre.

Last Wednesday evening Mlle. Rhea appeared in "Valeria," a charming French play, at the Casino, New Port, R. I. The play was given in the original French text, and the company supporting the star was made up of society ladies and gentlemen who are summering at that famous resort.

J. H. Haverly has already four companies forming, and his name will resound throughout the country as of old. There are two Silver King and two Mastodon companies. The Silver King companies are very nearly complete, and there are to be no names, numbers or letters to distinguish one from the other, as each is expected to be equally as good.

Mlle. Rhea, the charming French actress, very wisely determined to spend the present summer in America among her friends, the people of the United States, rather than return to Europe, her chief object being to overlook the making up of her company for next season and to perfect herself in the English language. She is now at Bristol Ferry, R. I., and the good effects of her work are decidedly marked. She has studied hard, and is now anxious to get back to the season of travel and acting.

Richmond Virginia State: "Minnie Hauk, and Durand and Mlle. Alice Urban, all of whom flourish successfully in the role of prima donna, both in the United States and foreign countries, are Creole girls from New Orleans, and had their musical start at the French Cathedral there. We do not know that this is so much to be wondered at when it is remembered that the crescent city was for many years the leading patron of first-class opera in this country, and that the musical taste of her citizens was so highly cultivated that nothing but the best skill could pass muster with them."

FASHION ITEMS.

Suits of terra cotta color are fast losing their popularity.

The fashion of dressing the hair high is becoming more and more general.

A suggestion of silver througbout an entire black suit is popular for second mourning.

Low shoes are worn by everybody this summer. Patent leather with kid tops are considered stylish. Both low heels and French heels are seen of these shoes.

Paris modistes are making dress waists very high in the neck, and when the square neck is worn a chemisette is employed that comes up close about the throat.

Five hundred yards of narrow ribbon, which is scarcely more than braid in width, are used on a single dress in rosettes, bows and loops that form a fringe of which the whole vest and tablier are made.

The linen duster is extinct as a traveler's cloak. Ladies now wear cloth, cashmere and summer silk dresses for traveling suits, with a tailor-made jacket or a Jersey polonaise that protects the dress from dust, and affords needed warmth.

YOUR PETITIONERS PRAY YOUR HONORable Court for incorporation for the purposes and with the privileges hereafter set forth, viz.:

1st. That Jas. M. Smith, Thos. M. Clarke, Edwin F. May, Robert H. Richards, Owin P Fitzsimons and Jessie A. Ansley, of Atlanta. Edward McDowell, of Spartanburg, S. C., and M. B. McMahan, of New York, together with such other persons as they may hereafter associate with them, be constituted a body politic and corporate under the name and style of the Georgia Land and Mineral company, who shall have power in their own name, or as agents for others to purchase, work, sell or otherwise dispose of lands, mines, minerals or other properties; to improve, work or utilize the same, by mining, manufacturing or chemical processes, and to sell or otherwise dispose of their products whether in their raw or manufactured state; and under that name shall have a common seal, which they may alter or amend at pleasure; may sue and be sue, plead and be impleaded, contract and be contracted with, and have all the attributes of a legal corporation, under the laws of this state.

2nd. That the capital stock of this company shall be twenty thousand dollars divided into shares of ($10.00) ten dollars each, with the right to increase its capital, by a two-thirds vote of its stockholders, to an amount not to exceed the limit allowed by law. Their principal place of business shall be in Atlanta, but they may establish their works, mines, factories or agencies at any other place or places they may deem proper for the best interests of the company.

3rd. That the corporation may at any time after the granting of this charter assemble and organise by the election of a board of seven or more directors who shall appoint officers to manage the affairs of the company under this charter and in accordance with such regulations and by-laws as may from time to time be adopted by them.

4th. That the company shall have power to acquire by purchase, lease, exchange or other legal means, such real estate or personal property, as may be necessary or desirable for their purposes, and, if deemed necessary, may issue bonds, on mortgage, negotiate money on other conveyance of its corporate property, loan, or invest the same, or do any lawful act for the furtherance of the objects of the company.

5th. That there shall be no individual liability of the stockholders of this company, except for the balance that may be due and unpaid on capital stock subscribed for by them.

6th. Your petitioners further pray that they may be incorporated for the term of twenty years with privilege of renewal.

A REAL REMEDY!

Neither Mystical nor Indian in Origin, but

SCIENTIFIC AND SPECIFIC!

A Remedy of over twenty-five years standing.
A Remedy more popular at home, and where best known than all other remedies of its kind.
A Remedy indorsed by the best physicians and druggists at its home.
A Remedy that Mr. C. W. O'Neill, Goodwater, Ala., says raised his wife from an invalid's bed, and he believes saved her life.
A Remedy of which a prominent Atlanta merchant said, "I would have given $500 as soon I would a nickel, for what two bottles of your medicine did for my daughter."
A Remedy in regard to which S. J. Cassels, M. D., druggist, of Thomasville, Ga., says: "I can recall instances in which it afforded relief after all the usual remedies had failed."
A Remedy about which Dr. W. B. Ferrell, LaGrange, Ga., writes: "I have used for the last 20 years the medicine you are putting up, and consider it the best combination ever gotten together for the diseases for which it is recommended."
A Remedy of which Dr. Joel Branham, Atlanta, said: "I have examined the receipe, and have no hesitation in advising its use, and confidently recommend it."
A Remedy which the Rev. H. B. Johnson, near Marietta, Ga., says he has used in his family with "the utmost satisfaction," and recommended it to three families, "who found it to be just what it is recommended."
A Remedy of which Femberton, Iverson & Denison say: "We have been selling it for many years, with constantly increasing sales. The article is a staple with us, and one of absolure merit."
A Remedy of which Lamar, Rankin & Lamar say: "We sold 50 gross in four months, and never sold it in any place but what it was wanted again."
A Remedy by which Dr. Baugh, of La Grange, Ga., says: "I cured one of the most obstinate cases of VICARIOUS MENSTREATION that ever came within my knowledge, with a few bottles."
A Remedy of which Dr. J. C. Huss, of Notosulga Ala., says: "I am fully convinced that it is unrivalled for that class of diseases which it claims to cure."
A Remedy about which Major John C. Whitner, of Atlanta, well and favorably known all over the United States as a general insurance agent, says: "I used this remedy before the war, on a large plantation on a great number of cases, and always with absolute success."
A Remedy about which Mr. J. W. Strange, of Cartersville, Ga., certifies that one bottle cured two members of his family of menstrual irregularity of many years stailding.
A Remedy that is cheaper than any other medicine of its kind in the world, because one or two bottles will cure the most obstinate case.
A Remedy in regard to whose unfailing, unrivalled curative properties I have many hundreds testimonials. This great spopular remedy is Bradfield's Female Regulator, (Women's Best Friend.)

SMITH'S
EXTRACT OF MAY FLOWER,
The Cap Sheaf of the Chemist's Skill.
The Great Remedy for all Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys.

This Remedy has stood the test of time, has been weighed in the scales of public opinion, and to-day has an army of men, women and children, who over their own signatures bear testimony to its curative properties. Some have been cured of Diabetes, some of Bright's Disease, some of Inflammation of the Bladder, some of Catarrh of the Bladder, some of Incontinence of the Urine, some of Leucorrhœa, or Whites, some of pains in the Back and Loins, some of diseases of the Prostate Gland.

For all Diseases arising from a diseased state of the Bladder and Kidneys, this Remedy stands without a rival.

Without a rival in the number of cures effected; without a rival in the purity of its composition; without a rival in number of bottles sold. The annual sale of Smith's Extract of May Flower exceeds the sales of all other Kidney Remedies combined.

DR. ELI IVES, says: "That in many aggravated cases, where Buchu had failed to produce any benefit, May Flower has effected a speedy cure."

DR. J. H. BIRD, says: "I have found May Flower to be a remedy for all Kidney complaints, far superior to Buchu or Juniper."

DR. H. F. MARTIN, says: "May Flower acts more promptly in all diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys than any remedy which has come under my notice."

DR. BENJ. H. LONG, says: "I have found May Flower exceedingly beneficial in my treatment of females.

DR. VINC. D. HUYVETTER, says: "Without doubt May Flower is destined to work a revolution in the treatment of diseases peculiar to the urinary organs."

DR. KING, in compiling his dispensatory, has paid a merited tribute to this remedy. See page 396 King's Dispensatory.

A number of authorities might be quoted, but there are none more eminent than the names above. In addition to these authorities, a living host of 60,000, whose certificates are on file in the office of the proprietors of this remedy, bear testimony to its virtues.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

HORRIBLE CASES CURED.
READ THE PROOF!
A HORRIBLE CASE

Of syphilis of fifteen years's standing cured with B. B. B. in two months. Mrs. S——, of Rome, Ga., contracted a terrible blood disease fifteen years ago, and was treated by eminent physicians without benefit. When she applied to Dr. Gillam for his B. B. B., her nose was an ugly sight, ver large, red and inflamed, a large ulcer on her upper lip, and two holes eaten through the palate of her mouth. In ten days after using B. B. B. her nose had retained its natural appearance, all sores commenced healing, and was pronounced cured in eight weeks, and has remained so over five years.

A SICKENING SIGHT

Pronounced hopeless. The whole breast a running sore, but cured under two months with B. B. B. If for no other reason than mere curiosity, every man and woman should read the following wonderful case:

"In October, 1879, my condition was frightful—sickening and repulsive. I was scorned and shunned, and nothing relieved my extreme suffering. Physicians pronounced it a hopeless case of constitutional spyhilis, and all treatment failed. I could not work, had no appetite, was emaciated, and growing worse every day. My whole breast in front was one mass—a foul, running sore. In this condition Dr. Gillam first saw me and said 'I can cure you.' He placed me upon the use of his B. B. B. and the large ulcerated surface commenced healing before I had used one bottle. The second bottle healed the entire ulcer, improved and strengthened my entire system, and in less than four weeks I was enabled to resume my regular business of gardening about the city. It has now been near four years, and not a symptom has returned. Respectfully,
BENJ. MORRIS,

Atlanta March 1, 1883."

SWIFTS' SPECIFIC

Is not a triumph of science, but is a revelation through the instinct of the untutored savage, and is a complete antidote to all kinds of Blood Poison and Skin Humor.

Swift's Specific has cured me of Scrofula, which is hereditary in my family. I have suffered with it for many years, and have tried a great many physicians and all sorts of treatment, but to no purpose; and when I began to take Swift's Specific I was in a horrible condition, but thanks to this great remedy, I am rid of the disease. There is no doubt that it is the greatest medicine in existence, and I hope any who doubt will write to me. E. C. HAWES, Jr.,
Clarksville, Ga.

After suffering twenty-five years with a painful Dry Tetter, and trying many physicians, I was at last relieved by the use of Swift's Specific, and I cheerfully commend it to all similarly afflicted.

PRICE LIST AND CATALOGUE.

This cut represents my IMPROVED COTTON CONDENSER, patented September 17, 1878, and re-issued June 8, 1880. My patent covers a perforated cylinder having closed heads, with a door therein, through which accumulations may be removed from the interior of the cylinder, and a casing arranged above and below at the ends in such a manner as to close the periphery of the cylinder to prevent the escape of dust and lint into the room, also sides and bottom openings, as specified in the patent, and is the only Condenser made that will allow a free action of the gin brush in straightening the staple, thereby making a fine sample, and that removes all dust and foreign matter from the house in which the gin is at work, making a lint room as pleasant as a parlor, and is an absolute safe-guard against fire, thereby saving more than its cost in insurance every season that it is worked. All the leading Gin manufacturers have arranged to manufacture this Condenser in connection with their Gins, under a regular license from me, and will stamp the words "Patented September 17, 1878," on each Condenser so manufactured, and persons using Condensers constructed under proper authority, as above indicated, will be protected, otherwise they will be liable, as well as the person manufacturing and selling the same, from infringement of said patent.

I am prepared at short notice to furnish a Condenser of this pattern for any Gin made in America. It is so simple that by simply making the inlet to correspond with the discharge flue of the Gin it will work as well on one Gin as another.

Price, ... $1.00 per Saw.
Payable November 1st.
